In Appreciation -

Oregon State University and Oregon, co-hosts of the annual Far West Classic at the Memorial Coliseum, would like to express their appreciation to the Portland Linebackers for their valuable and enthusiastic support of this fine holiday basketball tournament during the 10 years it has been held here.

The Linebackers are 12 businessmen who volunteer their talents to aid and support sports in the City of Roses. They have been a part of many successful events held in Portland, but the Far West Classic has taken up the greater part of their time and effort in the last decade.

The Linebackers help in many ways, but their support in promotion and hospitality have perhaps done the most to make the Far West Classic one of the country's best. They play a key role in the Tip-Off Luncheon, provide a host for each of the visiting teams, aid in providing local transportation, arrange for souvenir gifts and half-time entertainment, plus generally making the tournament a friendlier holiday affair.

The current Linebacker membership list includes:

A History of the Far West Classic Tournament

The 1969 Far West Classic is ending its first decade in Portland's Memorial Coliseum. During the past nine years this tournament, now co-sponsored by Oregon State and Oregon, has grown from just one of the many throughout the country, to national recognition as one of, if not THE best, collegiate basketball tournament in the country.

This recognition has been based on the high caliber of the competition, the quality of the Memorial Coliseum as a site for the tournament, and the friendly hospitality of the basketball fans and other interested community and business groups of Oregon.

The Far West Classic reached its all-time high in attendance in 1967 when 59,309 fans watched the 12 games which were climaxed by North Carolina's victory in the finals.

It all started years before the Classic ever became a fixture on the Portland sports scene. The late Slat Gill, then basketball coach at Oregon State, decided in the early 1950s there was really no good reason why his teams should be flying to other holiday tournaments throughout the country.

He set about to establish a tournament in Oregon, and in 1956 the Far West Classic became a fact when four teams (Oregon State, Washington, Southern California, and University of San Francisco) met in a two-day Far West Classic at Corvallis.

Utah and Yale joined the Beavers and the Huskies in 1957 and in 1958 the Beavers were host to Iowa, Wyoming and the Air Force. That was the last of the four-team tournaments.

In 1959 Oregon accepted an invitation to join Oregon State as co-host to the Classic, and the field was enlarged to eight teams. The Memorial Coliseum was then under construction, and in 1960 the Classic moved to its present home in Portland and its outstanding record of growth and success.

The Classic has moved far afield to attract top flight teams since its inception in 1956 with an all west-coast field. The competition has come from every major conference in the country, along with many more independent teams. The Big Ten has sent Michigan, Michigan State, Northwestern, Iowa, Purdue, Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota; Arizona, Arizona State, Wyoming, Brigham Young and Utah have come from the Western Athletic Conference; Tennessee and Louisiana State have represented the Southeastern Conference; West Virginia came from the Southern Conference; North Carolina was here from the Atlantic Coast; Princeton and Yale traveled from the Ivy League; St. Louis journeyed from the Missouri Valley and the independents have included Army, the Air Force, Idaho, Seattle, Portland University and Utah State.

The Pacific Eight has been well represented, too, with USC, California, Stanford and Washington taking part one or more times. Washington State has occupied a unique position, having joined the field in 1959 and played in every tournament since that year.

When Oregon State won the first championship in 1956, it did not seem likely the Beavers would put together a remarkable 27-game winning streak which would result in 10 straight titles. But they did, and it lasted until Indiana finally stopped the streak in 1966, when Washington was the eventual Classic champion in its first appearance since 1957. In 1967 North Carolina took home the winner's trophy and last year Oregon won their first winner's trophy.

The Classic has seen some brilliant individual performers in the past 12 years, and there undoubtedly will be more in the 1969 tournament. The list is a lengthy one and includes players like Cazzie Russell of Michigan, Charlie Miller of North Carolina, Dave Schelhouse of Purdue, Seattle's Eddie Miles, Washington's Bruno Boin and Doug Smart, Arizona State's Larry Armstrong, Washington State's Jim McKean, Oregon's Charlie Warren, Chuck Rask, Jim Barnett, Steve Jones, and Oregon State's Mel Counts, Dave Gambee, Jim Jarvis and Terry Baker. Many Classic fans will remember Army's Mike Stillman, who did not attract enough votes for the all-star team in 1964, but his abilities certainly came into play in the 1968 Olympic Games when he was one of the key men on the United State's championship team.

Attendance at the Far West Classic has increased at such a rate that crowds for the many evening sessions now exceed the total attendance of the early Classic. The largest single crowd was for the Oregon State-Brigham Young championship game in 1963 when 13,012 fans attended, but the growth in the tournament is perhaps better exemplified by the 1967 srowds. Last year cold, snowy weather kept the crowds down, although the total attendance figure reached 43,688. This year's rush on FWC ickets indicated a new total attendance record in the making. Pre-tourney sales reached a new high and all season ticket books were sold prior to the first game.

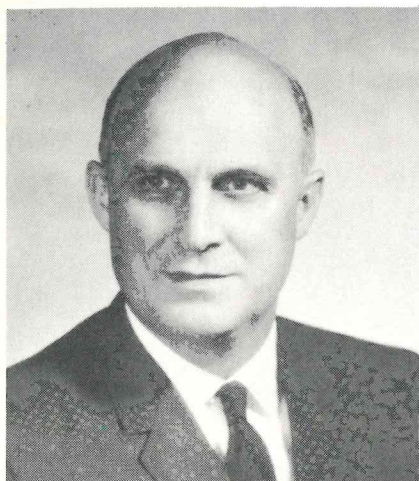

The Far West Classic management appreciates the support basketball fans have given the tournament in the past, and wishes to add that every effort will be made to maintain future Classics on the same high level of competition.

1969-70 OSU Basketball

Oregon State brings one of its most interesting teams in years to the Far West Classic.

The "interesting" part means that fans are sure to enjoy watching Coach Paul Valenti's current crop of cagers. It has both youth and maturity, both size and small players and a flock of basketball players who can shoot. And if it runs true to Valenti teams of the past, it will play good defense, too.

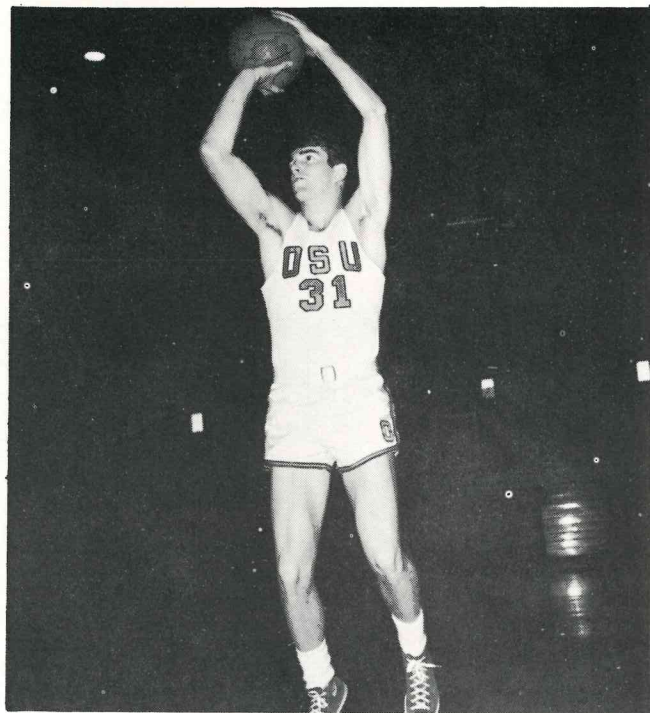

Paul Valenti

A pair of skyscraper seniors 7-0 Vic Bartolome and 6-9 Gary Freeman, give the Beavers size under the basket. Returning to duty this winter for his final season is smooth Vince Fritz, who missed last season because of back surgery. He was top scorer for OSU in his sophomore and junior years.

A couple of sophomores, 5-9 Billy Nickleberry and 6-2 Freddie Boyd, have been starting for Oregon State in the pre-season games. Most of OSU's front line bench strength will come from Tim Perkins, Larry Webber, Karl Weide, Bruce Bertrand, Gary Arbelbide, Bob Phelan and Jeff Haller. Perkins is the best shooter of the lot and Webber perhaps the top rounder.

With Fritz, Nickleberry and Boyd dangerous from outside, the big men underneath should be far more effective this season than they were last.

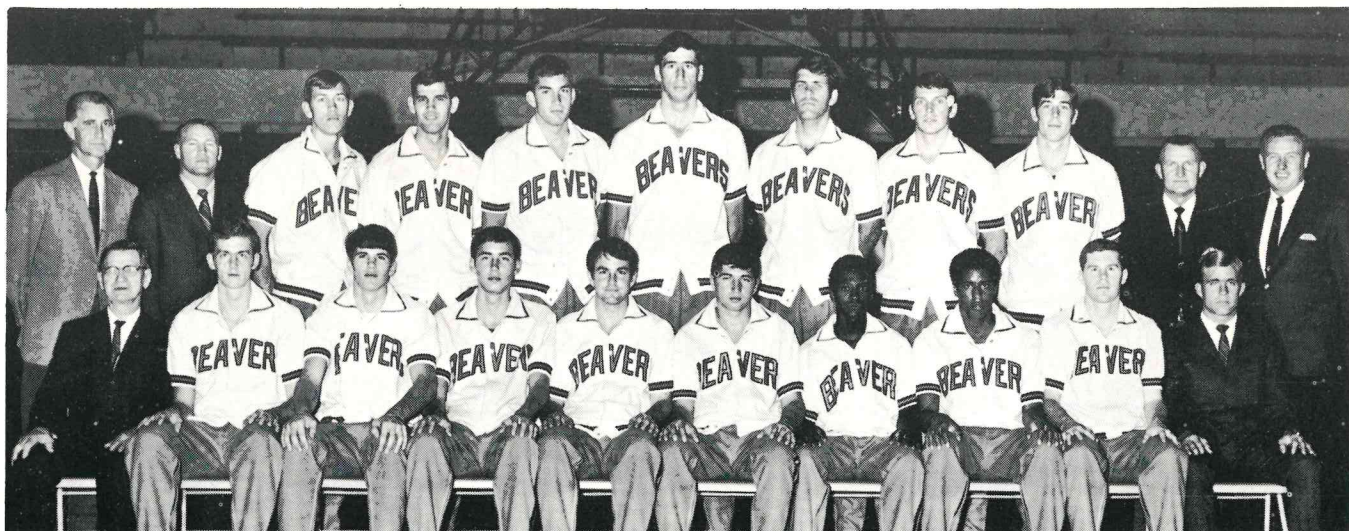

Oregon State has a great traditional background at the Far West Classic, having founded the tournament and won 27 games in a row before ever losing one. The 1969 Beavers here at the Classic would like nothing better than to start a new victory skein going.

A Tour of the Oregon State Campus

Oregon State University, Oregon's oldest state-supported institution of higher learning, recently celebrated its 100th Anniversary.

It was on Oct. 27, 1868, that a small academy incorporated as Corvallis College in 1858, was officially designated the state land-grant college of Oregon.

Education Hall with Pharmacy and Mitchell Playhouse in background

OSU enrolls more than 14,500 students annually, conducts research programs, and administers the Co-operative Extension Service in all counties of the state. The main campus, is in Corvallis, a city of 34,000 people near the center of the Willamette Valley, eighty miles from Portland and fifty miles from the Pacific Ocean. The University also has a Marine Science Center at Newport, a Seafoods Laboratory at Astoria, an ocean-going research vessel docked at Yaquina Bay, thousands of acres of forest lands, and branch agricultural experiment stations at several locations in the state, and OSU is one of the first three universities to be designated as a "sea grant" school.

A Beautiful Campus

Oregon State has a handsome, well designed campus of about 400 acres—with several thousand acres of farm and forest lands nearby. The wide lawns, shaded walks, and landscaped gardens of the main campus make this a pleasant place in which to live and study. The new Library is one of the finest in western United States. Other new buildings being constructed, and older ones being remodeled, fit into a newly approved long-range plan for campus development. Classroom buildings are so arranged as to be within easy walking distance of one another and of most of the living groups.

Student life and activities, especially student government, publications, and social events, center in the beautiful Memorial Union. The Mitchell Playhouse provides excellent facilities for dramatics and other forensics. Music groups perform in the Home Economics Auditorium and the Coliseum. Several galleries provide display areas for student art and traveling exhibits. Recreational facilities for men and women and playing fields for intramural sports lie close to the heart of the campus. The Coliseum, stadium, track, tennis courts, and baseball field are within easy reach of the living groups.

1969-70 USC Basketball

The USC Trojans, making their first appearance in the Far West Classic since the opening series in 1956, will be displaying a new style and new faces which have carried them to a 4-1 record to date.

Bob Boyd

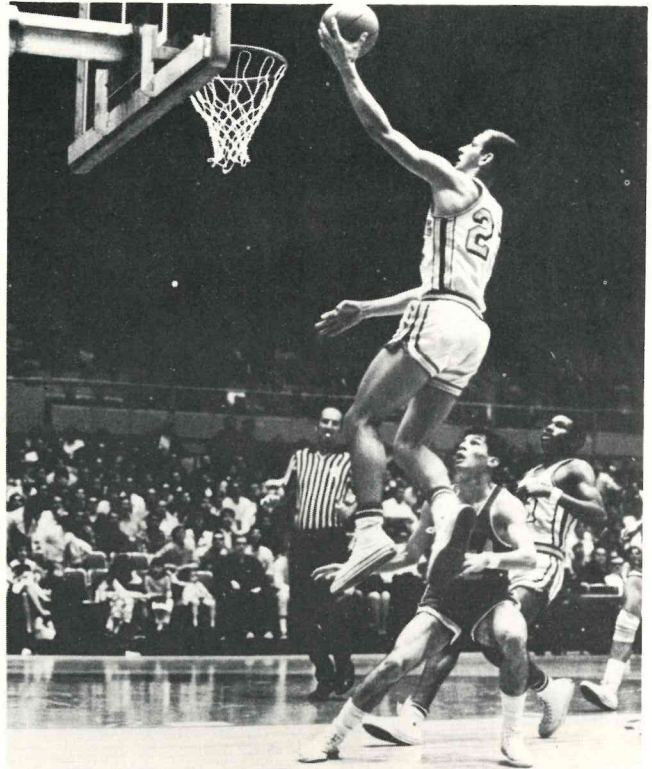

Included in their four victories are wins over nationally ranked Colorado, 88-74, and Louisiana State, 101-98. They have also defeated Iowa State 70-59 and Vanderbilt, 108-89. Their only loss was to Seattle, 74-70.

The Trojans have only one returning starter from last year, senior Don Crenshaw, a 6-4 forward. The only other returning lettermen are Dana Pagett and Chris Schrobilgen. Five sophomores, all members of the Trojan's undefeated Frosh team of a year ago, and three junior college transfers from Phoenix College, provide the nucleus of coach Bob Boyd's team.

Five Trojans are scoring in double figures, Crenshaw, sophomores Paul Westphal, Joe Mackey and Ron Riley, and transfer Dennis Layton. Westphal scored over 1000 points his senior year in high school and averaged over 18 per game as a freshman. Center Ron Riley is averaging 14 rebounds per game in addition to scoring in double figures.

Boyd calls Mackey "one of the finest outside shooting forwards in the country." And Layton has obviously adapted very quickly to the Trojan brand of basketball.

USC, in their first five games, has employed a fastbreaking unit that has been connecting on over half of the field goal attempts. They rely on a 1-2-2 zone defense.

A Tour of the Southern Cal Campus

The University of Southern California began operation with 53 students in 1880 on land donated by a Catholic, a Jew, and a Protestant. Nearly 1,000 persons, almost one-tenth of the population of Los Angeles, were present for the laying of the cornerstone on September 4, 1880.

Wait Phillips Hall of Education, University of Southern California

USC, the oldest major private co-educational university in the West, is non-sectarian.

The first USC building, Whidney Hall, was erected at a cost of $5,060 and furnished for $1,200. It is still in use by the School of Music. It is the oldest university building in southern California, and is Historical Landmark No. 536 of the California State Parks Commission.

In its early years, USC was primarily a college of liberal arts, but it soon became a major university. USC now consists of the College of Letters, Arts and Sciences; the Graduate School; eighteen professional or specialized schools, each with its own dean or director and faculty; plus Summer Session and University College, for late afternoon and evening classes.

USC's eighteen schools are Architecture and Fine Arts, Business Administration, Dentistry, Education, Engineering, International and Public Affairs, Journalism, Law, Library Science, Medicine, Music, Performing Arts, Pharmacy, Philosophy, Politics and International Relations, Public Administration, Religion, and Social Work.

The University Today

Under the leadership of its seventh President, Dr. Norman Topping, USC has achieved in whole or in a large part the major academic objectives of its Master Plan for enterprise and excellence in education. The plan's major objective was and is a high concentration of superior students, with a maximum enrollment of nearly 20,000 and the necessary physical expansion to accommodate them.

The USC faculty numbers 1,140 fulltime, 1,030 part time; and 2,255 volunteer medical faculty. Doctorates are held by nearly 90 percent of fulltime faculty in Letters, Arts, and Sciences, far above the national average.

Student enrollment in the fall of 1968 reached 10,719 fulltime and 8,879 part time. Sixty-four percent of degrees awarded in 1967-68 were graduate or professional degrees.

USC's campus includes approximately 111 acres and more than 73 permanent buildings. More buildings have been erected on the campus during the era of the Master Plan (since 1961) than were built during the first 81 years of USC's history.

If Washington's first four wins this year are any indication of things to come, the Huskies could be a real powerhouse under Tex Winter.

Tex Winter

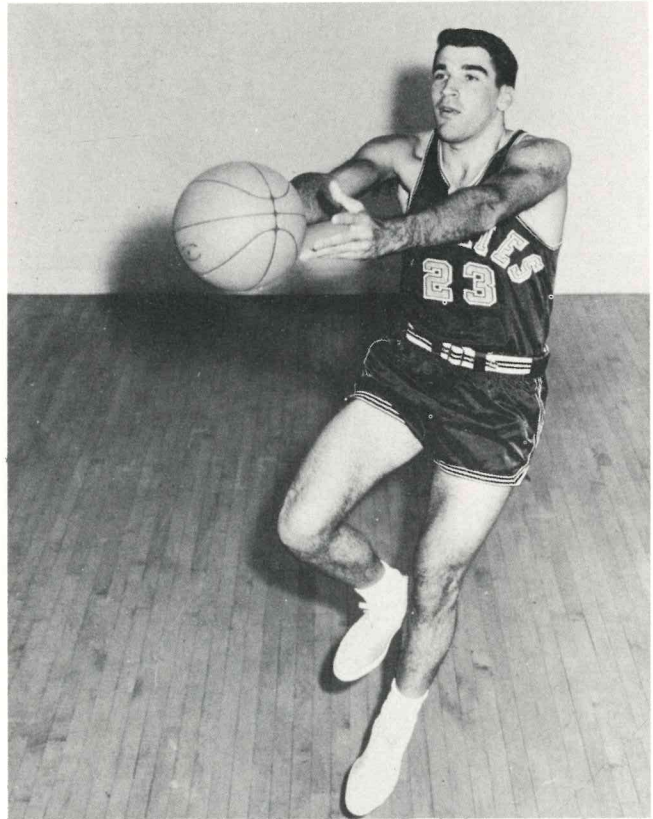

The reasons are many, one is Winter himself, next comes the return of all five starters from last year, the addition of two JC transfers, and three frosh, one of whom Winter says is one of the best basketball players he's ever coached.

"Steve Hawes", Winter said, "is probably the best basketball player I've coached in 21 years of college coaching at this stage of development." Hawes, 6-9 and 220 pounds, scored 550 points and averaged 26.1 points per game for the freshmen last season, both school records.

Not to be left in the shadows, however, is veteran George Irvine, a senior who is one of the top offensive forwards in the country. He owns virtually every Husky field goal percentage record and in his own right is an honors candidate.

Back to feed both of them is 5-9 playmaker guard Rafael Stone. Three other starters return, too, in defensive specialist Dave Willenborg, center Jay Bond, and forward Pat Woolcock. Also gunning for starting spots are two other Frosh, Bruce Case and Paul Tillman and two JC transfers, Chris Smith and Van Bye.

Washington currently owns victories over Idaho 105-58, Seattle 86-78, Montana State 88-68 and Utah State 90-61. They also played in the Sun Devil Classic last weekend.

A Tour of the Washington Campus

The oldest state-assisted institution of higher learning on the West Coast, the University of Washington, ranks among the largest colleges nationally with a student population of 32,500. Founded in 1861 on a 10-acre plot in downtown Seattle, in 1895 the University moved to its present 660-acre campus six miles from city center on the shores of Lake Washington and Portage Bay.

Aerial view of University of Washington campus.

Today's campus consists of more than 80 major teaching, research and service buildings, the largest being the Health Sciences complex with 1.6 million square feet. It includes a Cancer-Primate Center, the 320-bed University Hospital, a Child Development and Mental Retardation Center and the Schools of Medicine, Dentistry, Nursing and related sciences. From this Division have come significant contributions to modern science such as the heart-lung machine, the artificial kidney machine, an X-ray treatment for lymphatic leukemia and a detection method for cystic fibrosis.

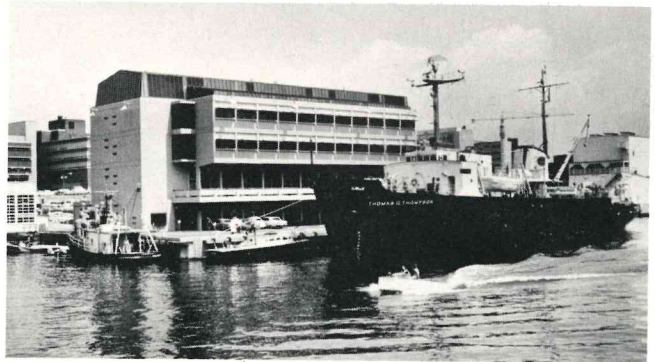

Because of its unique location midst the lush forests and sparkling waters of the Pacific Northwest, the University has gained international prominence in the fields of forest resources and marine sciences. This was the first university to offer an undergraduate degree in oceanography and today it carries out oceanographic research worldwide. The 50-year College of Fisheries uses the Pacific Ocean as a laboratory for studies ranging from the improvement of salmon and fishing techniques to food sciences and water pollution.

Marine sciences and health sciences are two fields of great importance to the University of Washington, with the fisheries and oceanographic facilities bordering Portage Bay and the Health Sciences complex right behind.

The University is noted as well for various aspects of its undergraduate and graduate programs in law, engineering, business administration, architecture and urban planning, public affairs, social work, librarianship and arts and sciences.

It is the second century for this, the University of a Thousand Years, and in fulfilling its obligations for teaching, research and public service, the University of Washington has emerged as a leading university nationally.

The University of Washington has achieved international prominence in the field of marine sciences. This new marine science building was added to the other oceanography and fisheries facilities on Portage Bay, bordering the campus. The Thomas G. Thompson is the University's oceanographic research vessel.

1969-70 Temple Basketball

Coach Harry Litwick, who led his owls to the National Invitation Tournament championship last winter, has already picked up a few more gray hairs during the current season. The Temple cagers won their first three games, including an upset of nationally-ranked (pre-season) St. John's, and all were decided in the final seconds.

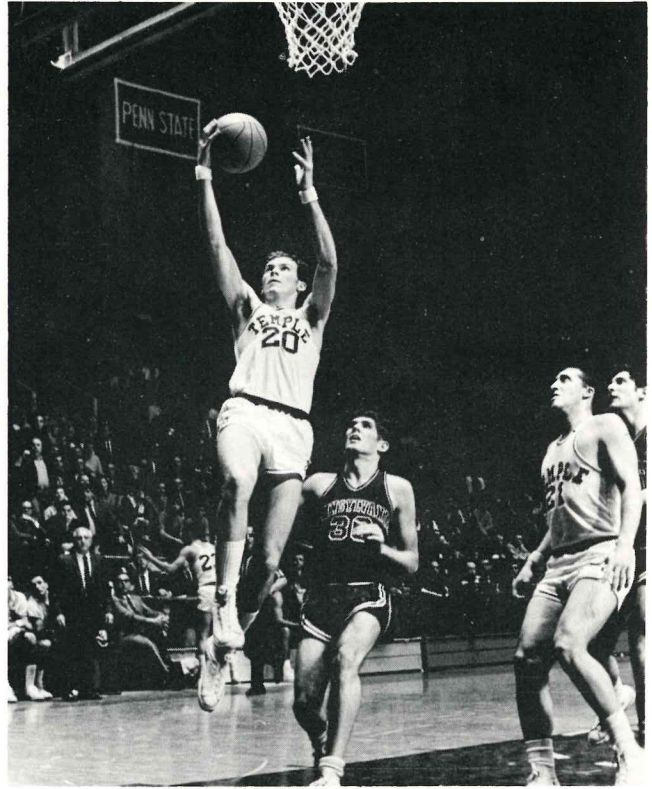

Harry Litwick

The Owls then suffered successive setbacks to New York University and Manhattan and owned a 3-2 record going into Saturday night's (Dec. 20) game with Delaware at the Palestra in Philadelphia. Temple's winningest coach and a veteran of the court wars, Litwick has a rebuilding job on his skilled hands with the loss of four starters from last season's NIT championship team that rolled to a 22-8 record.

Now in his 18th season as head coach at Temple, Litwick has been using a combination of juniors Bill Strunk and Jack Kirschling at the forwards, soph. Lee Tress at center and seniors Drew Nolan and Tom Wiczzerak in the backcourt.

Litwick has been using soph. Ollie Johnson as his first front court reserve and Ollie could move into the lineup by the time the Far West Classic arrives. Paul Collins, another rookie, and junior Pat Cassidy have been the first subs at guard. Tress is Temple's tallest player at 6-7.

The Owls turned back St. John's, 60-59, Lehigh, 73-70, and Rider, 61-59, before losing to NYU 64-62, in another squeaker and Manhattan, 80-68.

A returning starter from Temple's NIT championship team, Bill Strunk, dribbles in for a field goal against Penn.

Athletics At Oregon State University

By Jim Barratt

Oregon State University Director of Athletics

(Editor's note: This is the first of two articles prepared by the athletic directors of the host schools, Oregon State University and University of Oregon.)

Oregon State University boasts an aggressive athletic program, in the nation's strongest collegiate conference—the Pacific-8.

It is our goal to continue expanding our program to the point where all of our 15,000 students are involved in some way or another, either as a participant in a major or recreational sport, playing in one of our bands, or else enjoying the sport from the sidelines as a spectator.

Jim Barratt

warm and cooperative relationship between athletics and academics at our school.

Our most significant contribution to the student body, made possible through athletic funds, is the new AstroTurf in Parker Stadium. This artificial turf, plus lighting for night activities, opens a new world of multiple usage at Corvallis. The Parker Stadium turf, formerly used about six times annually, is now busy 16 hours per day with a beehive of activities, including physical education classes, intercollegiate athletics, recreational sports, band practices, and high school sports. The $350,000 expenditure was realized without benefit of tax moneys and funds from student fees. Instead, it was funded from athletic department reserves and donations from interested Oregon State boosters.

The local school district contributed funds for the lights in exchange for nine years of high school football games. The State A-1 football championships were played on Parker Stadium turf with Medford defeating Corvallis before more than 15,000 fans. The high school quarter-finals and semi-finals were also played at this facility, pictured below.

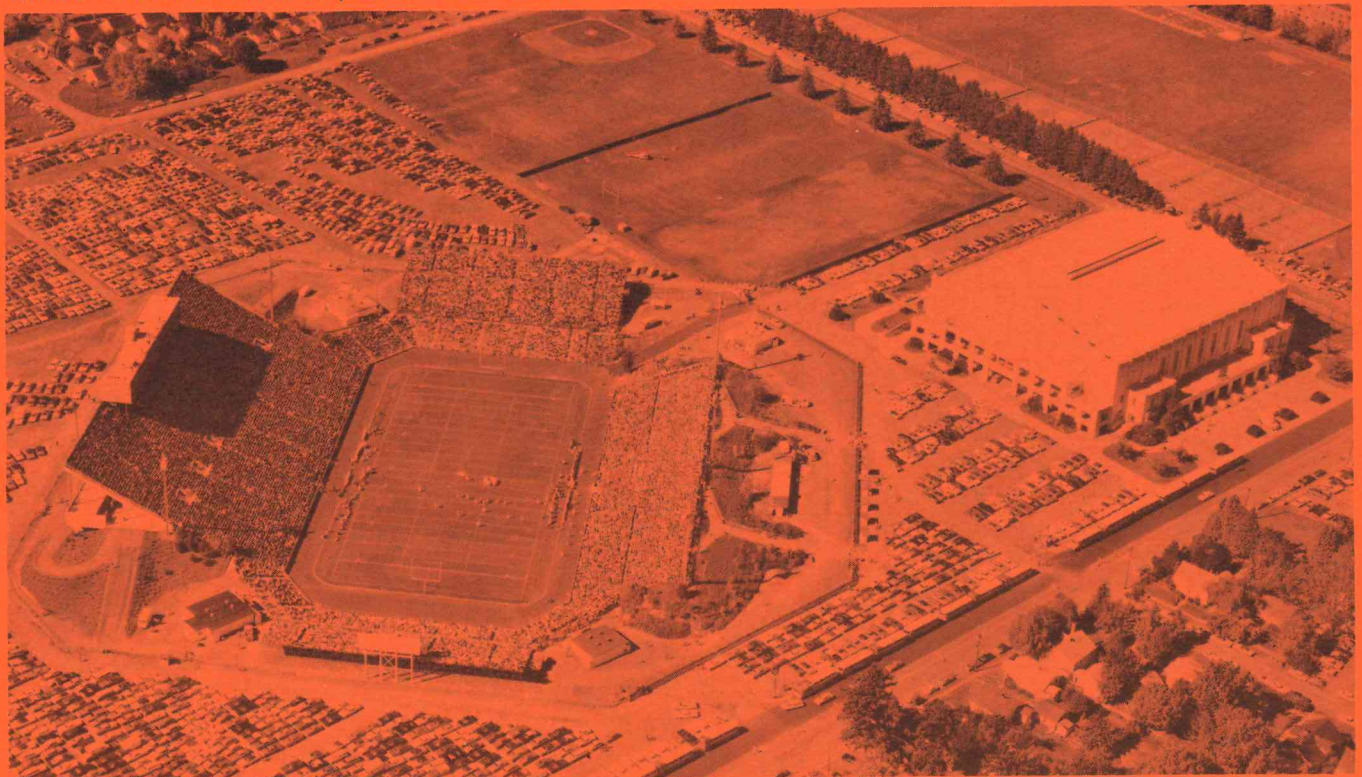

An outstanding group of coaches highlight the OSU scene. In five years, Coach Dee Andros has compiled an enviable 32-17-1 record and for three years was runnerup to USC for the Pac-8 football crown. Affectionately known as the "Great Pumpkin," Andros is successful and popular and makes Beaver fans proud to wear the orange.

Coach Paul Valenti, a former hoop great at Oregon State, has five years behind him as head coach and has given the Beavers one championship and one runner-up in Pac-8 basketball. Tremendously popular, the volatile Valenti is also a demon on the tennis court.

Third place finishes in the NCAA were enjoyed by track, coached by Berny Wagner, and wrestling, by Dr. Dale Thomas, at the conclusion of last season. Olympic high jump champ Dick Fosbury and NCAA and AAU heavyweight champion Jess Lewis brought fame to Oregon State.

Highly competitive also are the sports of baseball under Coach Gene Tanselli; golf, under Ed Larson; swimming, under Bill Winkler; tennis, under Don Megale; and crew, coached by Karl Drlica.

Student-athletes have fun in their choices of sports at Oregon State University, in the friendly community of Corvallis where "everybody boosts the Beavers."

A Tour of the Temple Campus

Summer 1969 marked the first use of Temple University's newest and largest facility, the physical education and athletics building, located in the heart of the main academic campus at Broad Street and Montgomery Avenue.

McGonigle Hall Arena, Temple's campus court which was dedicated on December 2, when the Owls upset St. John's University, 60-59. Capacity is 4500 for basketball.

This new home of the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics and the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation brings under one huge roof some 250,000 square feet of the latest facilities for teaching, research, training, student recreation and athletic competition. Completed in 2½ years, its cost is nearly $8 million with some $1.2 million for furnishings and equipment.

Most easily recognized in the block-square complex by its high glass wall front is McGonigle Hall, named in recognition of a gift for furnishings and equipment by Arthur T. McGonigle, a Temple trustee. Here is located the large arena seating more than 4,500 spectators for basketball, gymnastics and wrestling competitions with twin electronic scoreboards adaptable to the three sports. The 50 x 94 foot basketball court can also be divided into smaller courts for daytime physical education classes in volleyball, badminton or basketball.

Also in McGonigle Hall are athletic department, ticket, business and sports information offices; locker rooms for varsity and visiting teams and officials; coaches offices, training, first aid, equipment, steam and laundry rooms as well as ample press and broadcasting accommodations.

The physical education part of the building houses two large men's and women's sports gyms, both capable of being divided into smaller gyms; six general purpose gyms for use as gymnastic gyms, weight and wrestling rooms, a dance studio and adaptive gym. The adaptive gym has special equipment for students not able to participate in normal physical education activities due to physical limitations. Also here are a fencing room, teaching materials library, classrooms, seminar rooms, physical education departmental and staff offices and student and faculty lounges.

The aquatic section contains two 75 x 45 foot swimming pools, one having spectator seating for 500 persons. An adjacent diving well, 32 x 45 feet and 17 feet deep, has low and high boards and a 10-meter diving tower. All three pools have underwater windows for observation of swimming and diving skills. Access to the pools is from the men's and women's locker rooms, each having over 3500 individual lockers.

Extensive laboratory facilities provide greatly expanded physical education research programs in the areas of physiology, psychology and motor learning. Specific laboratories are devoted to research in blood chemistry, strength testing, pulmonary functions, body composition, physiology, motor testing and histology.

1969-70 WSU Basketball

Coach Marv Harshman, starting his twelfth season as head man, is looking for his fifth straight winner. It will be tough to improve on the 1969 mark, 18-8 overall and 11-3 in the Pacific-8. They finished second in the conference and their overall mark was their best since 1949.

Marv Harshman

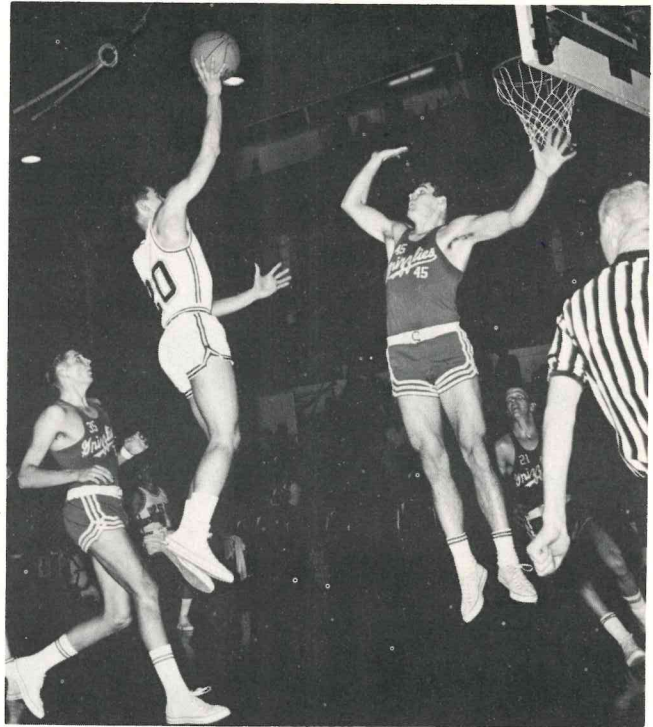

The Cougars return three starters from that fine club, forward Dennis Hogg and Gary Elliot and guard Rick Erickson, and eight lettermen altogether.

Coach Harshman says jaycee transfer Jack Bergersen, a 6-8, 225-pound strong boy from Seattle, clearly could be the difference for the Cougars this season. If Bergersen can move into Wierman's spot, WSU will be tough in any competition. Elliott, 6-6, and 6-7 Jim Meredith will give Bergersen good help in the front line, and Hogg will move back to guard to add his 6-5 stature to Erickson's speed and shooting in the backcourt.

Lettermen Steve Orme and Mike Gomez at the guards, and front-liners Jack Cooper and Jim Smiley, give the Cougars excellent experienced depth. Upcoming sophomores are Rick Rawlings, Ty Settles, Jim Nielsen, Guy Huestis and Dan Steward. Squad member Bobby Waits and Dave Harshman are back plus two JC transfers, 6-5 Bob Hutchens and 6-3 Phil Wash.

WSU was undefeated with five wins going into the Lobo Invitational last weekend. They polished off Gonzaga 84-69, Hawaii twice, 94-83 and 96-80, then Idaho 84-63 and Montana 106-77.

A Tour of the Washington State Campus

Washington State University, historically alert to new and changing demands made upon American educational institutions, has instituted a number of new programs under the leadership of Dr. Glenn Terrell, who became its seventh president in 1967.

Three examples are the Center for Social Research, the Experimental Education Program, and the Black Studies Program.

Holland Library at Washington State University

The center, authorized by the last State Legislature, will study and work toward developing solutions to the great social problems of the nation. It will draw on research scientists in anthropology, economics, political science, psychology, sociology and related disciplines.

EEP, now in its second year, is a special program designed for students from a variety of ethnic backgrounds who are not eligible for regular admission to WSU. It seeks to help them reach a level of performance which will enable them to complete successfully in the university's regular academic program.

The degree program in Black Studies began this fall, following a vote last spring by the university faculty to establish programs in American Minority Studies. Programs in Mexican-American Studies and American-Indian Studies will go into effect as soon as they can be developed.

Washington State University was founded in 1890 as Washington's land grant university. It has an enrollment of 13,150, including 1,569 graduate students, and a teaching faculty of 867.

A multi-purpose public institution from its beginning, WSU now consists of eight colleges and a graduate school. Some 42 per cent of students who have chosen majors are enrolled in the College of Sciences and Arts. The other academic units are the College of Agriculture, Economics and Business, Education, Engineering, Home Economics, Pharmacy, and Veterinary Medicine.

Physically, the campus includes nearly 100 major buildings and covers an area of almost 2,000 acres in the rolling Palouse Hill country of Eastern Washington.

Two new buildings will boost Cougar athletics. A $3.3 million physical education structure that includes a new swimming pool, is nearly complete. WSU will mark the pool's opening season by hosting the Pacific-8 swimming championships in March.

WSU fans and athletic officials alike are looking forward to construction of a new $6.3 million multi-purpose performing arts-coliseum scheduled for completion in 1972. The structure will provide a 12,500 seat arena to replace old and cramped Bohler Gym for basketball.

OFFICIAL BASKETBALL FOR THE FAR WEST CLASSIC

1969-70 Illinois Basketball

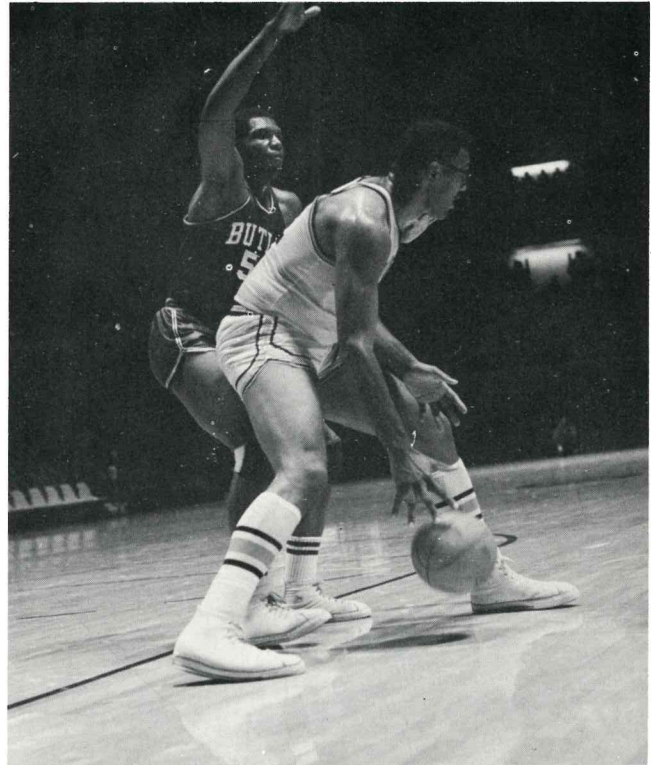

The Illinois basketball team has exceeded one-season expectations and moved into the nation's top 20. Not that there wasn't some optimism about the Orange and Blue, but there also was realization that loss of any of Coach Harv Schmidt's front line could put the Illini in real trouble.

Harv Schmidt

As expected, 6-8, 250-pound center Greg Jackson is leading the way in scoring and on the boards, co-captain Randy Crews has been turning in superlative defense performances, including a shackling of Creighton's Cyril Baptiste, whom he held to nine points. Biggest lift has been the outshooting of guards Mike Price, the other co-captain, Rick Howat, and Bob Windmiller. Howat has shown greatest improvement over last season, and is second on the club in scoring. The other starter is forward Fred Miller, who gets things done around the hoop despite his 6-4 height which often puts him at a disadvantage.

With the exception of guard Bob Shapland, who has turned in some fine defensive work, other members of the squad have been used sparingly thus far. It looks like Schmidt, in his third season with Illinois, will go with the guys who have been getting it done up to now.

A Tour of the Illinois Campus

The University of Illinois embodies a dynamic tradition, uniquely American, that higher education is the birthright of the many, not the privilege of a favored few. It is one of 68 land grant colleges and universities established under the Land Grant College Act of 1862 which gave public lands to the states to endow higher education for all.

The Broadwalk at the University of Illinois is a busy thoroughfare of youth, a never-forgotten sight for every student, alumnus and visitor who has viewed it during the 10-minute period when classes change. Here visible for brief intervals is a cross-section of the students of one of the world's greatest educational institutions.

The University of Illinois was chartered in 1867 by the Illinois General Assembly. It is governed by a board of trustees which includes nine members elected directly by the voters of the state, the governor, and the state superintendent of public instruction. The University opened March 2, 1868, at Urbana. Today it has three autonomous campuses.

President David D. Henry is the general officer responsible to the trustees for the University as a whole.

When the University opened just over a century ago, it had 50 students. In the fall of 1969, enrollment totaled 51,970. This included 32,759 at Urbana-Champaign, 2,933 at the Medical Center, and 16,278 at Chicago Circle. In addition, formal programs of instruction by the Division of University Extension last year enrolled 55,292 in extramural classes, short courses, conferences, institutes, special training programs and correspondence study.

At Urbana-Champaign, 15 colleges and schools offer undergraduate study, professional courses, and advanced work. The colleges are Agriculture, Commerce and Business Administration, Communications, Education, Engineering, Fine and Applied Arts, Law, Liberal Arts and Sciences, Physical Education, Veterinary Medicine, and Graduate College, and schools are Library Science, Life Sciences, Music, and Social Work. Here also are institutes, bureaus, experiment stations, headquarters for extension and other statewide services, and the University's general offices.

At the Medical Center in Chicago, the university is a part of the city's Medical Center District, the world's largest Medical center.

At Chicago Circle, the University's newest campus which opened in 1965, there are colleges of Architecture and Art, Business Administration, Education, Engineering, Liberal Arts and Sciences, Graduate College and School of Social Work and School of Physical Education.

In aiming at its three-fold goal of teaching, research and service, the University of Illinois is more than a tri-campus institution—it is a statewide network of education, reaching every county of Illinois. Service activities such as extension bring educational advantages to all parts of Illinois; more than 84 per cent of students enrolled on the campus are Illinois residents, and come from every county; and research benefits all the people of the state and the nation as well. There also are students from all 50 states and from 90 foreign countries.

One of the first athletic plants in the country is composed of Memorial Stadium and the Assembly Hall on the Urbana campus of the University of Illinois. Memorial Stadium seats 71,227 and is used for football, track and large outdoor meetings; the Assembly Hall seats 16,128 for basketball and is used extensively as a multi-purpose building. Parking space for hundreds of automobiles and buses is available close by. Cars in upper left are parked on a 9-hole golf course.

1969-70 MSU Basketball

Michigan State has a new head basketball coach and some exciting players headed by a potential super-star, but overall prospects appear so-so at best.

Gus Ganakas is the new head mentor, succeeding the late John Benington, under whom he served the last three years as an assistant coach.

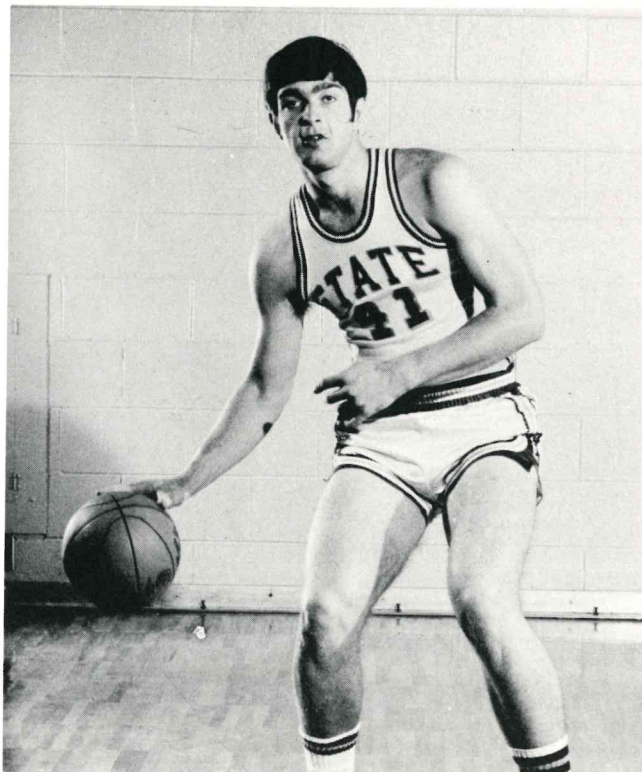

Gus Ganakas

Six lettermen from the 1969 team return, but only two rated as starters. The team needs and could receive a tremendous boost from a group of six sophomores. One of the newcomers is the potential super-star, Ralph Simpson, a 6-4 guard-forward from Detroit. He is the complete ball player, a scoring whiz who averaged 40 points per game as a freshman last winter, a strong rebounder, a fine ball handler and playmaker.

Improved shooting and hence higher scoring, a sure-handed offensive court play and tenacious defense in the classic Benington style should be prime asset of this team. There may be some strength in numbers if not in extensive individual brilliance.

Lack of size is sure to hurt. State lost four of its five big men via graduation. Only Gibbons returns.

In early season action, MSU downed Eastern Kentucky 89-85 and Western Michigan 86-71. They lost a close 82-80 decision to Toledo and have also played Butler and in the Utah Classic.

A Tour of the Michigan State Campus

Founded in 1855, the nation's pioneer land-grant college, Michigan State University, continues to pursue its innovative approach to public education. More than 40,000 students attend this, the state's largest and one of the nation's leading institutions of higher learning.

These students come from every corner of the world—85 foreign nations, every state, and every county in Michigan. They are offered a wealth of academic opportunities in 15 colleges, a school for advanced graduate study and an honors college.

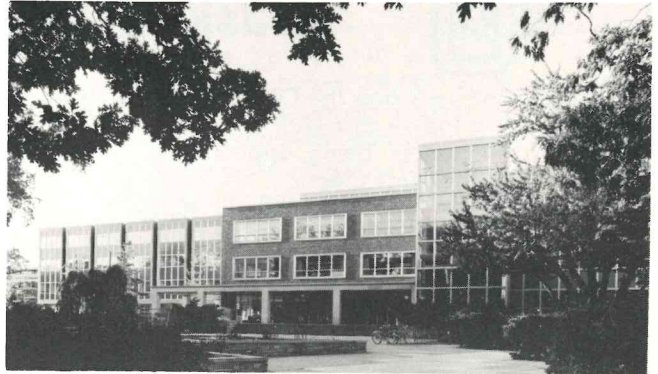

The internationally-acclaimed faculty attracts a student body which includes the largest concentration of merit scholars in the nation. Curricula range from the arts and medicine, through business, education, engineering and high energy physics.

Along with the traditional fields, MSU offers innovative programs to prepare students to meet the problems in the ghettos, the developing nations and a rapidly urbanizing society. Prominent in this effort is the Center for Urban affairs and Equal Opportunities Program.

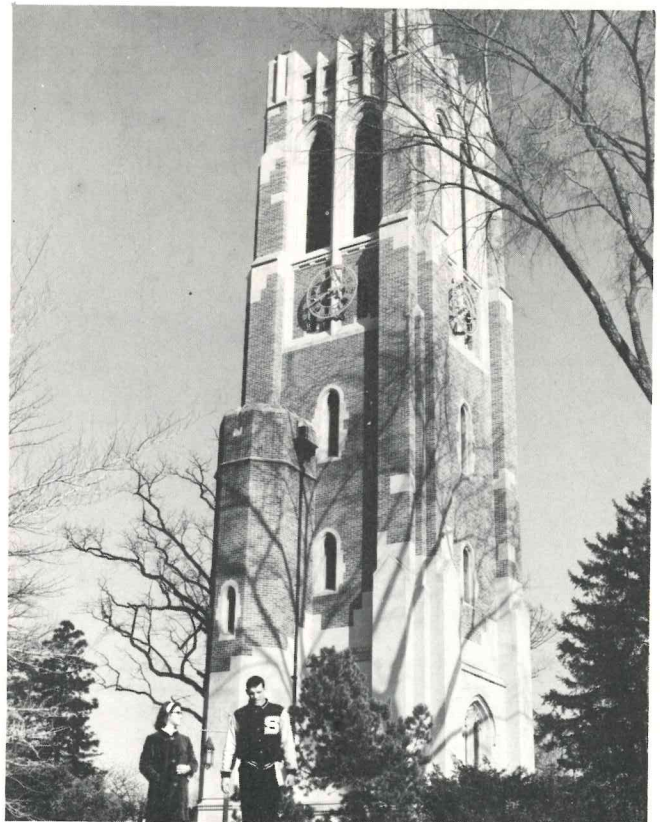

Supporting the strong academic curriculum are more than 2,400 research projects. Researchers may work with the cyclotron, or nuclear reactor, or in the comprehensive computer center and new research library. Michigan State is the site of the Atomic Energy Commission's plant research laboratory.

Once rolling farm land, the 5,000-acre campus in East Lansing is a city in itself. . . 22,000 students live in university housing where new approaches make it possible to take classes in the residence halls. Many of the aspects of the small college are incorporated with the advantages that only a large university can provide.

1969-70 Oregon Basketball

Exactly one year ago the Oregon basketball roster was virtually a rookie cast with over half of the Web-foot squad members being sophomores. And still they won the Far West Classic.

Coach Steve Belko can now count on nine solid letter winners and four starters returning from last year's squad, which finished the season 13-13.

Steve Belko

Not only does Oregon have nine lettermen back, but a pair of fine prospects off last year's Frosh team figure to make their presence felt this season. Rusty Blair, 6-8, can play either forward or center, and Guard Ken Strand, 6-2, who paced the Frosh in scoring last year with 392 points.

Love 6-9, returns at the pivot position after tallying 463 points last year. Billy Gaskins, the 6-1 fireball, returns for his final year. Leaping Larry Holliday, while only 6-3, was second in the Pac-8 rebounding department last year and sharpshooter Bill Drozdiak, a .465 percentage shooter from the field and .802 from the charity line, can play either forward or guard.

Oregon's record this year includes wins over New Mexico 60-59, Portland 93-78 and Montana 92-81, after opening losses to Wichita State 97-84 and Florida State 100-84. They also tangled with Gonzaga December 20.

A Tour of the Oregon Campus

The University of Oregon is a young university— not yet 100 years old.

Organized by an act of the Oregon Legislature in 1872, University of Oregon did not begin operation until 1876. The first campus consisted of one building (Deady Hall) and the student body numbered 177 with a faculty of five.

Johnson Hall — Administration Building

Today, the University has an enrollment of 15,000 students, including more than 3,000 graduate students. There are more than 1,000 faculty members. In addition, 1,200 students are enrolled in the University's Medical, Dental and Nursing Schools located on the Portland Campus. To accommodate the rapid growth from an enrollment of less than 5,000 a little more than ten years ago, educational programs have been expanded and many new buildings have risen on the 250-acre Eugene campus.

The University of Oregon is one of seven schools in the State System of Higher Education and holds primary responsibility for instruction in liberal arts and numerous professional schools.

Included in the University are the College of Liberal Arts, the Graduate School and seven professional schools, all on the Eugene campus, and the schools of Medicine and Dentistry in Portland. Professional training is offered in Architecture and Allied Arts, Business Administration, Education, Health and Physical Education, Journalism, Law and Music.

Oldest of the professional schools is the School of Law, which was first established as a night law school in Portland in 1884 and was later moved to the Eugene campus. Next oldest is the Medical School which was also established in Portland in 1884.

The main campus is located in Eugene at the head of the Willamette Valley, 110 miles south of Portland, and is a community of 78,000 in an urban area of about 175,000. This setting is ideal for the student seeking a non-metropolitan educational atmosphere.

Oregon's Honors College, a full four-year college, is unique in public higher education. Established in 1960, the Honors College offers superior students the advantages of a small, high-quality liberal arts college combined with the resources of a large university.

The University Library is the largest university library in Oregon and one of the largest in the Pacific Northwest. The total number of volumes is over one million. In addition to books and bound periodicals holdings of photos, pictures, sound recordings, and other materials number more than one million items.

The University's Museum of Art is the largest art museum of any state university campus in the United States. The museum, housing the Murray Warner Collection of Oriental Art and other University art collections, was built in 1930.

The real measure of the University is to be found in its graduates, who in every walk of life bear witness to the fact that this is an outstanding educational institution.

Pick the right day to test drive a Volkswagen and you'll have the road to yourself.

Back when the weather was better, everybody was inviting you to come in and test drive their new whatever's.

But now that the weather isn't so hot (and a test drive is really a test), the invitations have dropped off sharply.

Now maybe you can spare a little time to try out the new Volkswagen.

Not right this minute. Wait for a nice lousy day. The next time it's snowing or slushing or something like that, drive down to your Volkswagen dealer. (If you can make it in your car.)

He'll be happy to take you out and show you how a Volkswagen works when hardly anything else does.

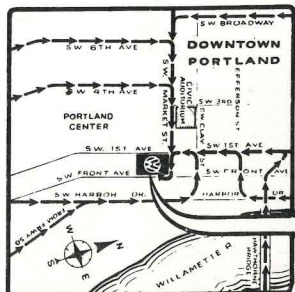

How the weight of the motor on the rear wheels makes the VW dig in and go, in the snow or the mud, or even on ice.

As you pass all the stranded cars that passed their test drives in balmy days, he'll tell you about the VW's other cold-weather comforts.

The air-cooled motor. It doesn't freeze over, so it doesn't need anti-freeze or a winter thermostat.

And if you have to leave the car out on a cold wet night, it's got four coats of paint and a sealed bottom to keep it cozy.

You've even got an edge with a VW if the worst happens and you get stuck. What could be easier to push?
