The Nation's Finest Holiday Tournament

Oregon's 40 classic stories.

First National's new 40-story Administration Headquarters tower, with its adjacent operations building, is symbolic of a growing Portland . . . and a growing Oregon. It's a classic story of growth . . . one we're proud to be part of at First National.

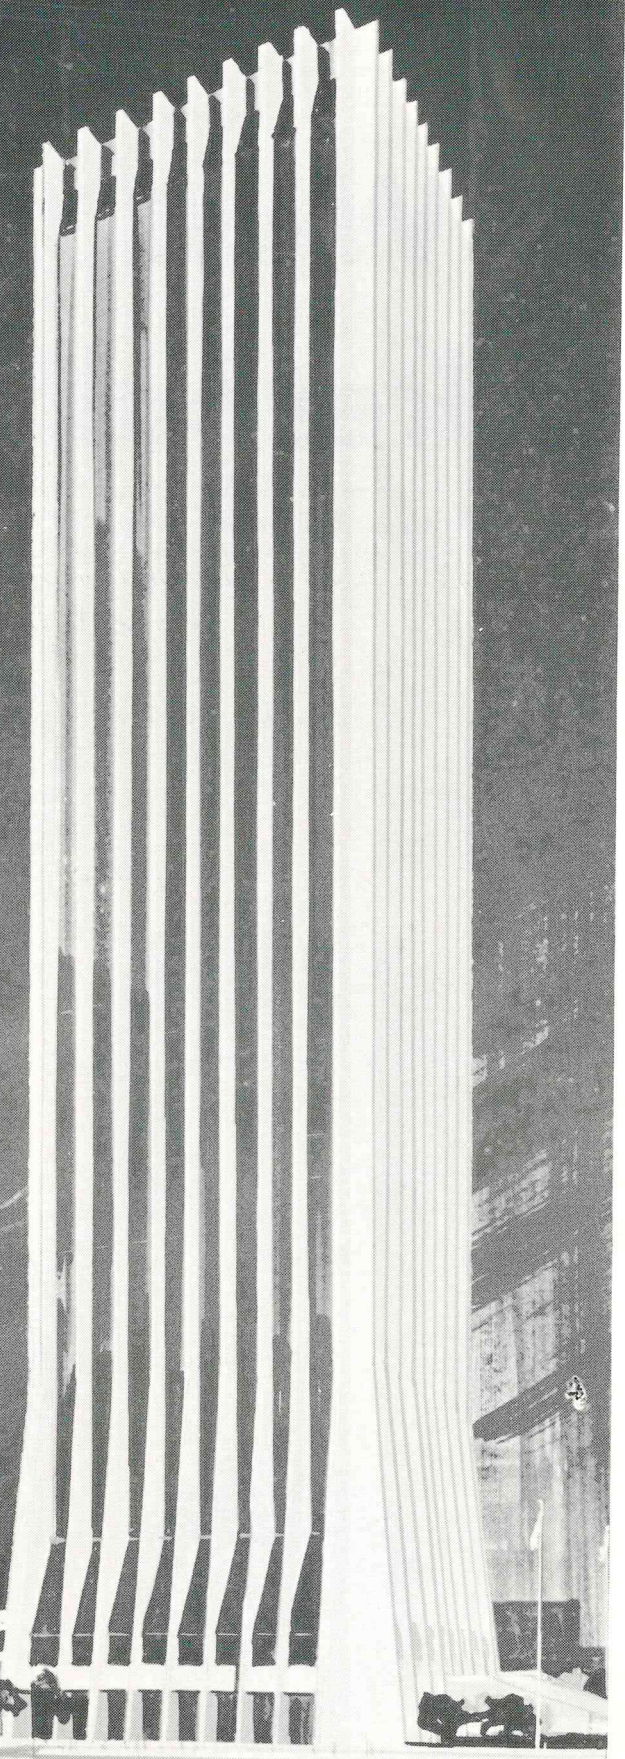

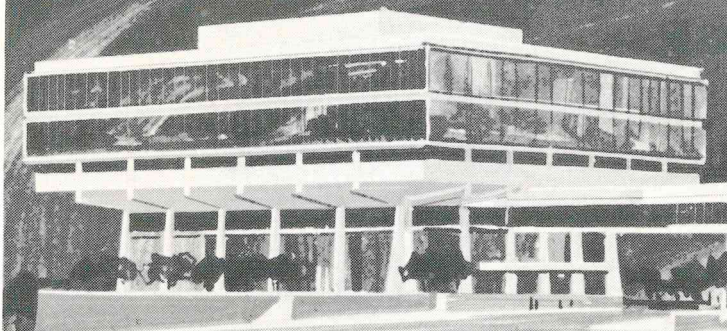

Another classic story taking place in Oregon is basketball's Far West Classic. It's a tournament of great teams . . . and sports fans in Oregon extend a special welcome to these athletes from all over the United States.

Whenever you're in Portland, stop by our headquarters building and say hello to your First friends. You'll like the kind of banking service we're known for . . . at First National Bank of Oregon.

In Appreciation -

Oregon and Oregon State University, co-hosts of the Far West Classic, thank the Portland Linebackers for their valuable and enthusiastic support of this holiday classic. Since the tournament moved to Portland in 1960, this group of 12 business men has been the on-the-scene agents of action for the classic planning and promotion.

The Linebackers give support to a number of sports-related activities in the City of Roses but the Far West Classic is their speciality. They each contribute long hours in both planning and execution to insure that the event is a success each year. And each year it becomes more successful.

Just a few of their accomplishments relative to the Classic include the team hospitality rooms, the arrangements with Chrysler Motor Co. for providing team transportation, the promotion of the tip-off luncheon, the honorary captain program, souvenir team gifts, half-time entertainment, and many other details of promotion. Their dedication and devotion to the Classic cause continues year after year.

To each Linebacker, Oregon and Oregon State say "THANK YOU". It's difficult to imagine how the Far West Classic could have grown without you.

1971 FAR WEST CLASSIC BASKETBALL
IS MacGREGOR XIOL

A History Of The Far West Holiday Classic

This is the 16th annual Far West Classic. The past 11 have been held here in Portland's Memorial Coliseum. During the past 11 years this tournament, now co-sponsored by Oregon State and the University of Oregon, has grown from just one of many holiday basketball tournaments throughout the country to one of, if not THE best, collegiate basketball tournament in the country. It is truly the Nation's Finest Holiday Tournament.

"Slats" Gill

It all started years before the Classic ever became a fixture on the Portland sports scene. The late Slats Gill, then basketball coach at Oregon State, decided in the early 1950s there was really no good reason why his teams should be flying to other holiday tournaments throughout the country.

He set about to establish a tournament in Oregon, and in 1956 the Far West Classic became a fact when four teams (Oregon State, Washington, Southern California, and University of San Francisco) met in a two-day Far West Classic at Corvallis.

Utah and Yale joined the Beavers and the Huskies in 1957 and in 1958 the Beavers were host to Iowa, Wyoming and the Air Force. That was the last of the four-team tournaments.

Oregon Joins

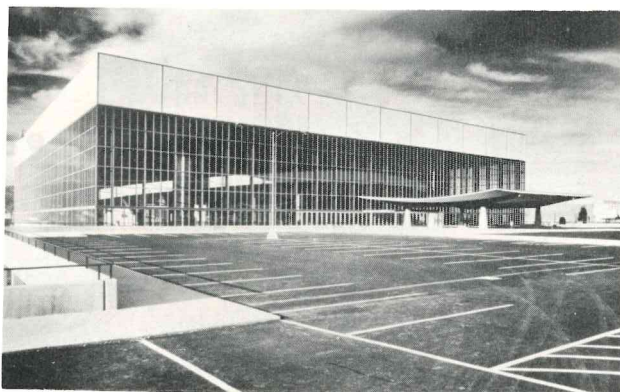

In 1959 Oregon accepted an invitation to join Oregon State as co-host to the Classic, and the field was enlarged to eight teams. The Memorial Coliseum was then under construction, and in 1960 the Classic moved to its present home in Portland and its outstanding record of growth and success.

The Classic has moved far afield to attract top flight teams since its inception in 1956. The competition has come from every major conference in the country, along with many more independent teams.

The following is a participation breakdown, with the number of appearances in parenthesis:

Pacific-8 (51)

Oregon State (15), Oregon (12), WSU (12), Washington (4), California (3) Stanford (3) and USC (2).

Nicknamed "The Glass Palace", Portland's Memorial Coliseum, home of the Far West Classic

Independents (20)

Idaho (4), Portland (4), Seattle (3), Air Force (2), New Mexico (1), Denver (1), Hawaii (1), Army (1), West Virginia (1), Syracuse (1) and Temple (1).

OSU Wins Again

When Oregon State won the first championship in 1956, it did not seem likely the Beavers would put together a remarkable 27-game winning streak which would result in 10 straight titles. But they did, and it lasted until Indiana finally stopped the streak in 1966, when Washington was the eventual Classic champion in its first appearance since 1957. In 1967 North Carolina took home the winner's trophy with Oregon sweeping the titles in 1968 and 1969. Last year OSU repeated again and is now after championship number twelve.

63,872 See 1969 Classic

Attendance at the Far West Classic has increased at such a rate that crowds for our many evening sessions now exceed the total attendance of the early classic. The largest single crowd to see a Classic game was established in 1969 when 13,330 turned out for the OSU-Washington and Oregon-WSU semi-final doubleheader. A record total of 63,872 turned out for the 1969 classic.

The Far West Classic management appreciates the support basketball fans have given the tournament in the past, and wishes to add that every effort will be made to maintain future Classics on the same high level of competition.

Oregon State Basketball 1971-72

Nobody—even coach Ralph Miller—really knows how good a basketball team Oregon State will have this winter.

On paper, the situation looks bright enough, but realistically, it's still a young team. Through the early December games, Miller was starting two sophomores, two juniors and one senior, incomparable Freddie Boyd.

In fact, there are only three seniors on the entire squad, others being Billy Nickleberry and Tom Phipps. So while the Beavers do have a lot of potential, they still must profit from experience, game by game.

Miller, in early games, started 6-11 soph Steve Ericksen and 6-6 junior Sam Whitehead at forward; 6-9 junior Neal Jurgenson at center; and 6-4 soph Ron Jones and 6-2 Freddie Boyd at guards.

Substitutes were Jim Cave, Phipps, Nickleberry, Gary Erickson, Rick Reed, Larry Webber and Jeff Haller. All of the above are holdover lettermen with the exception of Cave, who transferred from Treasure Valley JC and looked impressive in his first few appearances.

Freddie Boyd

The Beavers didn't look good in their two-game debut in Hawaii against the U. of Hawaii. They dropped both games. After that, however, they recorded wins over Idaho and Oklahoma State (twice). As expected, Boyd and Whitehead were running 1-2 in the scoring department with averages of around 17 points.

Oregon State will have an interesting team, to be sure, and it should be improved over a year ago. That was only the second time in Miller's 20 years as a major college head coach that he experienced a losing campaign (12-14), and he doesn't care for that to happen again.

Miller: Win and Entertain

Ralph Miller

Basketball was meant to be played for a full 40 minutes and that is what Ralph Miller believes more than anything. "Pressure basketball" is what he calls it and the fans love it.

Miller, in his second year, took over the OSU coaching reins after highly successful terms at Wichita State and Iowa. His all-time coaching record is 327-198 and he ranks among the nation's top ten winningest coaches. Only twice has he had losing seasons.

A native of Kansas, Miller was a star football and basketball player at Kansas, graduating in 1942. In Wichita prep ranks following military duty, Miller won a state title and was second and third in three years. He then moved to Wichita State for 13 years, then on to Iowa. His last Hawkeye team was 14-0 in the Big 10.

Basketball, according to Miller has two goals. They are to (1) win and (2) entertain.

Washington State Basketball 1971-72

Basketball begins a new era at Washington State this year as Bob Greenwood makes his debut as head coach.

The new coach faces somewhat of a rebuilding year, with only one full-time starter and two part-timers among the six returning lettermen. Guard Dan Steward, who averaged 12.8 points per game, is the lone starter, along with 6-9 Mike Dolven and 6-8 Jim Nielsen who shared the center chores.

Bill Flowers, a 6-6 redshirt, and Morris Griffin, a 6-6 transfer from Yakima Valley College, are among the leading forward candidates, along with holdover reserves Guy Huestis and Rick Rawlings and sophomores Bob Niehl and Dave Meredith.

In addition to Steward, other guard candidates include redshirt Paul Jenkins, sophomores Pat Rogers, Brad Jackson and Frank Donaldson, and last year reserves Don Paul, Joe Garrity and Steve Kebbe. The center position is likely to be a battle between 6-10 Steve Bergstrom, a redshirt from the 1969-70 squad, and Nielsen, who is a strong rebounder.

Dan Steward

Washington State looked impressive in early-season contests in December. The Cougars did lose once to Gonzaga, but came right back with a victory over the Bulldogs and also recorded wins over Montana and Idaho. WSU has a tough schedule, as always, but experience in the early games is sure to help down the conference stretch later on.

The Cougars would love to improve on their 12-14 record of last season, and might well accomplish that goal.

New Cougar Mentor

Coach Bob Greenwood

New Cougar head coach Bob Greenwood is a 17-year coaching veteran, with eight years as a head coach on the college level.

He made the move to WSU from Iowa of the Big 10, where he was an assistant. The former Ohio University grad coached three years at Rider College (N.Y.) and five years at Washington University of St. Louis before moving to Iowa.

Greenwood was also a successful prep coach at Orange High in Cleveland and Massillon, Ohio. In 1959 he coached the East to victory in the High School All-American game in Hutchison, Kansas.

Greenwood's overall coaching record is 233-127.

WSU Adding New Basketball Pavilion

Washington State University, the land-grant institution for the State of Washington, is designed to serve the educational needs of the state, to carry on basic and applied research and to disseminate the practical results of research to Washington citizens. As a land-grant university, it provided liberal and practical education in the various pursuits and professions of life, as established by the Morrill Act, signed by Abraham Lincoln in 1862.

The university, which opened with 21 students, now consists of eight colleges and a graduate school, offering undergraduate and advanced training in numerous areas of intellectual and technical specialization. The university enjoys a national reputation for high academic standing through important contributions to knowledge by its faculty and outstanding accomplishments in career fields by WSU graduates. Many staff members have been honored by Guggenheim awards and Fulbright scholarships; they have participated in international conferences; and they have served as consultants to state, national and foreign agencies. Many hold national and regional offices in academic and professional organizations, and others have authored outstanding textbooks and scholarly studies.

Evidence of Washington State's academic reputation is contained in the fact that it was awarded a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the national liberal arts honorary, in 1928. It also has a chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honorary, as well as chapters of almost all the important national professional and scholastic societies.

The teaching staff, numbering nearly 800, provides a student-teacher ratio of approximately fifteen to one for more than 14,000 students. These students and teachers work on a campus of approximately 2,000 acres with nearly 100 major buildings.

Recent additions to the campus include important teaching and research facilities—a nuclear reactor, plant sciences building, veterinary clinic, and engineering, chemistry, biological sciences, education, social science, and music buildings.

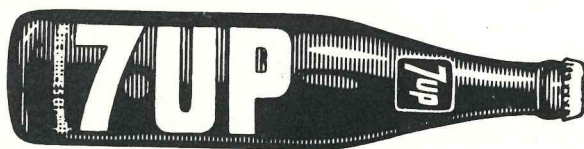

A new addition to the campus will be the Fine Arts-Basketball Coliseum. Located on the old football practice field, the new facility will seat more than 12,000 for basketball and 13,000 for fine art performances. It is expected to be ready for the 1973-74 basketball season and is part of a vast new Design Discipline and Fine Arts complex.

Another building complex just completed on the vast campus is the Agricultural Sciences Building which will be headquarters for the College of Agriculture. It will also have large classrooms, research centers and laboratories.

WSU is one of the largest residential universities in the West, housing nearly eighty per cent of its students on the campus. Within walking distance of classrooms, library and centers of social life, university students learn in an atmosphere which provides for personal and intellectual development.

Washington Basketball 1971-72

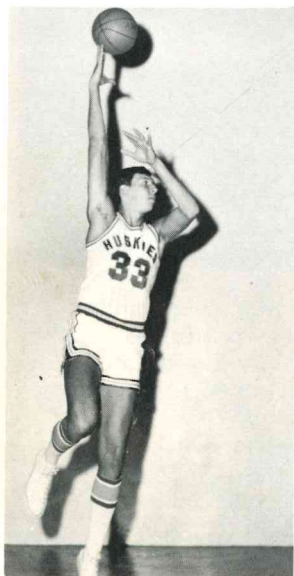

Washington's tall and talented Huskies got off to a fine start this winter, winning their first four games over Portland U, Portland State, Colorado and Seattle U.

This wasn't really unexpected.

A lot of people feel that Washington is a definite Pacific-8 conference championship contender, right along in the same breath with UCLA and USC.

There's all indication that Washington will have excellent shooting, led by one of the best offensive centers in the west, Steve Hawes. A 6-9 senior, he should be headed for his best season.

Three talented and experienced performers are available. Two of these, the probable starters, must be considered for conference honors. Louie Nelson started most of the games last year, and Charles Dudley was a JC all-American a couple years ago.

Steve Hawes

and rebounding come around, Washington could have quite a basketball team in 1972.

Maybe one of the best.

Bruce Case, a 6-5 senior, is quick enough to play guard and big enough to handle forward. Among other top candidates on the squad are Reggie Ball, Paul Tillman, Jim Mossel, John Quigg, Ken Krell, Jeff Hawes and Ray Price.

Marv Harshman's high-low post appears to be perfect for the current crop of Huskies. If all stay healthy, and the defense

Harshman Coach at Washington

Marv Harshman

When Marvel K. Harshman left Washington State, jumped over the Cascade Mountains and settled in Seattle, he brought with him one of the most respected reputations in sport and over a quarter of a century of coaching.

Harshman takes over for Tex Winter, who left after three seasons to guide the Houston Rockets of the NBA.

For 13 seasons (1959-71) he guided the WSU Cougars after a successful 14 year stint at his alma mater Pacific Lutheran (1945-58). His career record is 391-292. Seven times while at PLU he was named NAIA District 1 "Coach of the Year".

A native of Wisconsin, Harshman went to high school at Lake Stevens, and after one year at Washington and a two year layoff, he went to PLU, where he earned four letters in football, basketball and track and one in baseball.

U of W Among 15 Largest Universities

The University of Washington, founded in November, 1861, is now in its second century of service to the State of Washington.

The original site of the University was on a 10-acre tract of wooded wilderness on the outskirts of the frontier settlement of Seattle. Fewer than 40 students answered the bell on November 4, 1861, when the Territorial University opened its doors for the first time.

The University of Washington:

- is one of the 15 largest Universities in the nation
- is the oldest public institution of higher education on the Pacific Coast and celebrated its 100th anniversary in 1961
- is a member of the Association of American Universities and is one of four members in the 11 Western States
- is one of the first universities in the country to establish a nuclear engineering program
- draws students from every state in the country and from 96 foreign nations
- has a permanent faculty of more than 1400 scholars

University of Washington surrounding

The University's greatest period of growth came in the years following World War II. The expansion included the establishment of four-year medical and dental schools, a teaching and research hospital, more than a dozen classroom and research buildings and several student residence halls. The present campus has a physical plant of about 100 permanent buildings and a basic area of more than 600 acres.

Eight Major Schools

The University at present is organized into seven colleges and eight major schools. Within these major divisions of the University are more than 100 departments, institutions, and schools. The seven colleges are those of Architecture and Urban Planning, Arts and Sciences, Education, Engineering, Fisheries, Forestry, and Pharmacy. The eight major schools are the Graduate School and schools of Business Administration, Dentistry, Law, Medicine, Nursing, Social Work, and Graduate School of Public Affairs.

Official Basketball for the Far West Classic

Florida State Basketball 1971-72

With four or five starters returning from a club which went 17-9 last year, there is the potential for an outstanding season. "But potential doesn't win ball games," warns Seminole Coach Hugh Durham, "only performance does."

Among the returnees is senior forward Rowland Garrett. Joining him will be juniors Reggie Royals, Ron King and Otto Petty.

King and Garrett are the good bets to keep their positions from last season. The 6-4 King is destined to become one of the Seminoles all-time scoring leaders. No better "natural shooter" has worn Florida State colors. Last year he led the team with a 22.7 average and broke the Tribe's single game scoring record with 46 points against Georgia Southern.

Petty, at 5-7 one of the smallest collegiate basketball players, was a starter at the point most of last season, when he made a record 227 assists. This year he is receiving a strong challenge from 5-8 senior Greg Samuel and 6-2 sophomore Otis Cole.

Cole is one of two sophomores with a shot at becoming a starter this year. Lawrence McCray (6-11) appears to be the choice to fill Ellzy's vacated low post spot.

Other lettermen who return and figure big in the plans this season are senior Ron Harris and junior Larry Gay.

In addition to McCray and Cole there are four other sophomores who figure in the plans. Artie Fryer, 6-5, and Jim Calkin, 6-4, add depth at the wing spots, while 6-7 hopefuls John Amick and Bill Wright will see time at the post positions.

Durham Former FSU Star

Hugh Durham

In five years Hugh Durham has transformed Florida State basketball into one of the nation's more respected and consistently ranked teams.

Durham has reached two of those goals set five years ago. In 1967-68, the Seminoles went to the NCAA Mid-East Regional Tournament. The 1969-70 season saw the Tribe running off to a 23-3 record and lofty national rankings throughout the season. A national championship is the third goal.

This will be Durham's 13th season at Florida State, either as a coach or player. A graduate of Eastern High in Louisville where he earned a total of 14 letters in basketball, baseball, football and track, Durham chose Florida State over several other schools.

He scored 1,381 points in three varsity seasons with two 500-plus years. He was an Honorable mention All-America, graduating in 1960.

Oregon News Makers

Two names made unusually large headlines in University of Oregon athletics this year. One name belongs to Oregon's newest coach and one belongs to the senior coach on the Oregon staff. Dick Harter and Bill Bowerman.

With the playing of this year's Far West Classic, Oregon introduces coach Dick Harter to the city of Portland. His credentials are impressive. In his last two years at the University of Pennsylvania he led his team into the NCAA playoffs and in the race to the national championship last year lost but one game, that to cross-town rival Villanova.

Dick Harter

Harter feels that basketball is a player's game and whatever success he has will depend on the performance of his athletes. A simple philosophy: the better the player the more success. As in most simple truths, however, there are many implications to consider if you accept the premise. One is the matter of work.

Fans who have sat in on the practice sessions of the webfoots know what the word "work" means as applied to Oregon basketball. Each day's drills are meticulously planned by Harter and his staff and the practice runs with a clockwork precision. There are no idle moments.

To play for Oregon, disciplined concentration is demanded of every athlete. And an attitude. There are different names given to the mystique of why some teams win and others lose — the "winning spirit" some call it — and Harter feels it is a thing that happens in every aspect of the basketball experience. Not just the period of time the ball is in play. He feels it is the way you enter onto the floor, the way you warm up and even the way you sit on the bench.

That is the kind of basketball he is teaching at Oregon. And this same philosophy underlies his beliefs about the young men he wants to play basketball at Oregon. He will look for the good student as well as the talented athlete. Harter has faith in his program because it has worked for him.

Ray Edelman is the senior assistant on the staff and he has been with Harter for six years. Hart calls him his X and O man — he plots defenses the way most people pursue a favorite hobby. One suspects that the headboard of his bed is a full length blackboard to accommodate his nocturnal flashes of inspiration.

The second basketball assistant is Dick Stewart. Dick played his college basketball at Rutgers and went to work for Harter at Penn in 1970. In addition to his duties with the varsity, Stewart is freshman coach.

Two graduate assistants work with the basketball program, both in coaching and in talking to prospective athletes. Jim Wolf and Jim Haney are both doing graduate work in business administration.

So a new program begins in Oregon basketball. Call it the Harter Era if you wish (but out of earshot of the coach) or call it Oregon's player's program. Whatever you call it, there is one promise made to the fans of Oregon — the action will be exciting and the style of ball will be physical and disciplined. Tough basketball.

Bill Bowerman received the highest honor an American track coach can receive — an appointment as Olympic coach. Bowerman will lead what promises to be the most powerful track team ever assembled into the Olympic Stadium of Munich, German next year. His journey to Munich has been a dramatic one.

It started in 1948 with his appointment as track coach at the University of Oregon — a teacher returning to his Alma Mater. As a student, Bowerman had played football and run track under the great track teacher Bill Hayward. Before coming to the Oregon job he had taught and coached football, basketball and track at Medford High School. His teams were the scourge of southern Oregon.

Oregon had established a fine reputation in track and field when Bowerman took over but he wove into the tapestry of tradition his own special brand of accomplishment. He has always considered himself a teacher — don't call him coach. His genius has been in teaching athletes to find and use the best parts of their mental and physical talents. The Bowerman regimen is demanding — total commitment — and requires an extraordinary degree of toughness in the student. To be a "Man of Oregon" is the highest compliment Bowerman can bestow on his athlete and that accolade is not lightly earned.

His 23-year record of accomplishment is his most eloquent testimonial. Four national track championships and two runner-up finishes. In 14 of the last 19 years he has finished in the top ten nationally. His track All-Americans would fill a line from Portland to The Dalles. He has had 25 Olympians. NCAA individual champions number 17. Bowerman has taught more people to run the mile in less than four minutes than any other coach in the world. From the 3:56.2 of Dave Wilborn to the 3:59.8 of Wade Bell, the list totals ten runners. Jim Bailey ran the mile in 3:58.6 to establish the first sub-four minute mile in the United States in 1956.

It is difficult to fully measure the impact Bowerman has had on the University of Oregon track program, the city of Eugene, the state of Oregon and, in many ways, the entire United States. His horizons have been far beyond the narrow limits of his Oregon track accomplishments.

Bowerman has built a track establishment in the state of Oregon that supports track with a knowledgeable exuberance unknown to other sections of the nation. Athletes from across the country have marveled at the wild enthusiasm showered on them for their outstanding efforts.

So William J. Bowerman begins the job of organizing the U. S. Olympic effort. He will put his athletes on display in the Olympic Trials planned for Eugene beginning June 29, 1972. The trials will run for ten days and it will be the biggest carnival of track and field to ever have played in the state of Oregon.

This recognition of accomplishment for Bowerman pays tribute to the exceptional teacher who, through a life time of study and teaching, has influenced generation of Americans - and not just athletes who have worked with him. Bill Bowerman has honored both the University and his state by bringing to himself the Olympic appointment. That is the top of the mountain.

Florida State Founded In 1857

Florida State University's 10 schools and colleges are the several academic homes of more than 17,000 students in 1971—students who hail from the four corners of the world as well as the home state.

This public, coeducational institution of higher learning is one of nine in the State University System of Florida. Founded in 1857, it is the second oldest university in the public system and a senior leader in graduate education and research programs.

Although Seminole sports can be traced back to the first decade of the 20th Century, the University's history includes a number of years when it was known as the Florida State College for Women (1902-47). The dynamic growth of intercollegiate athletics, since co-education and university status came to the campus in 1947, has paralleled the phenomenal physical and enrollment growth of the institution in the last two and one-half decades.

Academically and athletically, Florida State is a contender for top ranking among the nation's leading universities. Earlier this year, the American Council of Education rated eight Florida State graduate programs in the physical, biological and social science areas among the better programs in the nation, giving chemistry the highest rating of "strong and distinguished." Two Nobel Laureates have been added to the faculty roster—one a full-time, the other on an annual winter quarter basis.

One of only 24 institutions in the country which confers more than 100 Ph.D. degrees each year, Florida State is now graduating an average of 5,000 students annually from its College of Arts and Sciences, Education and Law, and from its Schools of Home Economics, Music, Library Science, Social Welfare, Business, Nursing, and Engineering Science.

At the undergraduate level, Florida State students have a choice of more than 95 different baccalaureate fields of study; and at the graduate level, a choice of more than 85 master's degree areas and more than 55 doctoral programs.

A pioneer in the field of oceanography for many years, Florida State is making marine studies one of its strong points of emphasis in the decade ahead. Facilities for oceanographic research are located both on the campus and in the Ed Ball Marine Laboratories on the Gulf of Mexico, south of Tallahassee.

Math-Meteorology Building.

The University's largest grouping of physical facilities for scientific research is to be found in its Science Complex, on the western quadrant of the campus. This Complex interconnects major units in the sciences by means of a network of arcades which provide a built-in proximity for interdisciplinary research.

Rounding out the University's research resources are two nuclear accelerators, a million-book library and special research facilities in geo-physical fluid dynamics, educational technology, molecular biophysics, social research, political research, psychobiology and psychology.

Michigan Basketball 1971-72

The Michigan basketball team returns many proven commodities from a squad that went 19-7 and finished second in the Big Ten but 1971-72 must be considered a question mark season, the reason being that 6-10 center Ken Brady will miss at least half the year while recovering from knee surgery.

With Brady, coach Johnny Orr expected to trigger his explosive running attack. Henry Wilmore, 6-3½ junior, returns with his 25.0 average. 6-6 senior guard Wayne Grabiec also returns, with his 12.1 average.

Ernie Johnson, 6-8, has moved to center where his quickness and speed should enable him to battle bigger and stronger men. Moving in at forward is 6-5 junior John Lockard. With Wilmore, the two give Michigan one of the fastest front lines anywhere.

Johnson and Lockard will be setting the picks for Wilmore but can't be ignored as scorers. Both are tough inside, Lockard because of his jumping ability, Johnson because of his quickness.

Michigan Invitational December 20-21.

Triggering the offense will be Dave Hart, a quick guard at 5-10 who is an adept passer.

Orr feels that the unit is strong and that they possess flexibility. He realizes how great the loss of Brady is but maintains that Michigan has enough talent to keep going.

The Wolverines topped the one hundred mark their first outing of the season in a 101-83 win over Notre Dame. They also topped Western Michigan and Eastern Michigan, while losing to Marquette. Michigan also played in the

Johnny Orr

Entering his fourth season as Michigan's head basketball coach, 44-year old Johnny Orr has rebuilt the Wolverines' cage fortunes to the point of being one of the Big Ten's top teams. Last season's team which finished 19-7 and second in the conference was the best since the days of Cazzie Russell and placed Michigan in the NIT, making the Wolverines the first Big Ten team to ever receive an invitation.

Orr has developed a reputation as one of the finest fast break coaches in the country and his teams justify him.

Orr's career record of 81-62 includes a 39-33 record at Massachusetts (1963-66) and 42-32 at Michigan (1968-1971). He was assistant to Dave Strack two years before taking over Michigan's head job.

Michigan History Covers 151 Years

In 1817 the Territory of Michigan chartered the ancestor of The University of Michigan, the Catholepistemiad of Michigania. The Reverend John Monteith was the first president of this institution, which was located in the frontier community of Detroit. A new charter was issued by the state of Michigan in 1837, and The University of Michigan was relocated in Ann Arbor. In its 151-year history the University has had, besides Monteith, only nine presidents and one acting president.

The original 40 acre campus in Ann Arbor has expanded to over 20,000 acres of land, including research facilities in Illinois and the Rocky Mountains.

The University's library system includes the General Library, Undergraduate Library, 21 divisional libraries, seven departmental and area collections, and four special libraries with over four million items.

Approximately 225 acres of land at the University are devoted to the program of physical exercise and recreation. This includes the Michigan Stadium, the world's largest collegiate stadium, and the new Crisler Arena.

In the fall of 1970, the total enrollment stood at 39,661. During 1969-70, a total of 9,346 degrees was awarded. There are more than 250,000 alumni throughout the world.

The U-M has 18 individual schools and colleges. Related research and educational units include 30 centers, 20 institutes, 6 bureaus and 8 hospital units.

The volume of research in fiscal 1969-70 amounted to a total of $62 million. The single largest sponsor is the Department of Health, Education and Welfare ($18.2 million).

The U-M has a self-supporting, intercollegiate athletic program. It fields teams in football, basketball, baseball, track and field, swimming, hockey, wrestling, golf, cross country, gymnastics and tennis.

New Mexico Basketball 1971-72

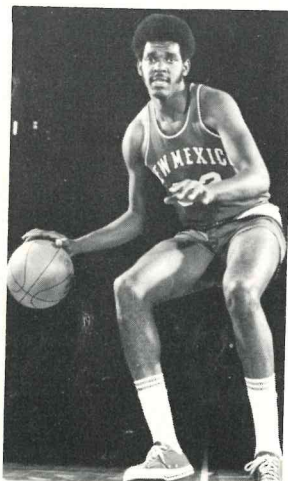

Coach Bob King of New Mexico lost some top hands through graduation, but he still has the potential for an interesting — and winning — basketball team.

In fact, the Lobos won four of their first five games in early December. They split with New Mexico State, and downed Whittier, Oklahoma Christian and Texas Tech.

Mike Faulkner, at 6-7, is the leading returning veteran for New Mexico. He came on strong at the end of last season and was second in scoring with a 13 point average. The other returning starter is 6-4 Harold Little.

King believes he will have better overall quickness this season. Two junior college transfers, Darryl Minniefield and Chester Fuller, make this possible.

Mike Stewart, Tom Roberts and Rick Wright are also returning lettermen, and up from the freshman team are Mark Saiers and Gabe Nava. The inside game revolves around Faulkner. King will have his two inside men switching. Joining Faulkner will be 6-8 Mike Stewart, a sometime starter last year, 7-3 Paul Kruse and 6-6 Saiers.

Mike Faulkner

This is the first visit for the New Mexico Lobos to the Far West Classic, and patrons are anxious to see the southwest power in action.

New Mexico has a long and successful basketball background. Playing in their 17,305 seat arena, they led the nation last year by attracting 212,168 fans.

King In Ninth Year

"Bob" King

Robert L. "Bob" King is in his ninth year as head basketball coach at the University of New Mexico.

Since King arrived on the New Mexico campus, the Lobos have turned from a hapless also-ran into a major power on the national level. In the eight years that King has been the head man, the Lobos have recorded a 160 win and 78 loss record, won and shared a Western Athletic Conference crown, made three trips to the N.I.T. and participated in the NCAA Western Regionals.

In fact, King's first year (16-9) gave the Lobos their first winning season since 1951.

He coached in the high school ranks for 12 years and compiled an overall record of 205 wins against 75 losses. At Iowa he served as assistant to coach Sharm Scheuerman for three years and then moved West to take over the head job at the University of New Mexico.

UNM Enrollment Passes 19,000 Mark

Nearly half of all college students in New Mexico are enrolled at the University of New Mexico.

UNM, with its main campus at Albuquerque, has experienced an enrollment gain of more than 80 per cent in the last seven years, going from about 10,000 students in 1964 to more than 19,000 this year. The bulk of the student population is at the Albuquerque campus. Other student centers are a two-year branch college in Gallup, N.M., graduate and undergraduate resident centers in Los Alamos, N.M., and a center for study and research in Quito, Ecuador.

While UNM attracts students from around the globe, the majority come from New Mexican homes.

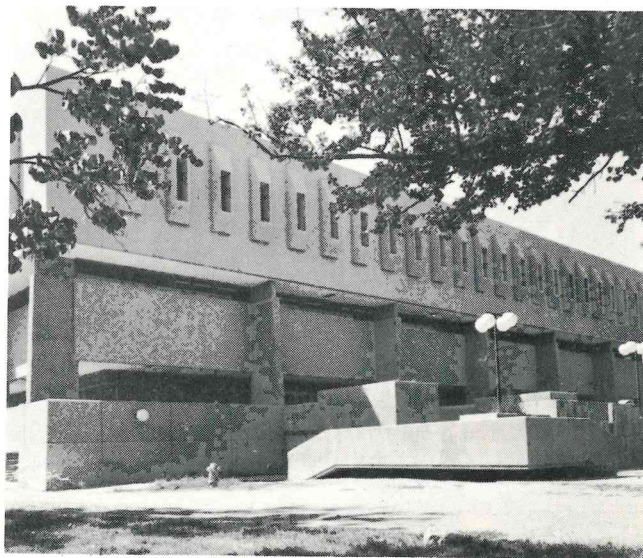

Enrollment is spread among 11 colleges and schools—University College, the Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Engineering, Education, Fine Arts, Nursing, and Pharmacy, and the Schools of Law, Medicine, and Business and Administrative Sciences, and the Graduate School.

Nearly a quarter of UNM's enrollment is at the graduate and professional level. More than 3,000 students are enrolled in the Graduate School alone. The University offers the master's degree in 47 fields and the doctorate in 27 programs in the colleges of Arts and Science, Education, Engineering, Fine Arts, Law, and Medicine.

During its early years the University of New Mexico acquired an outstanding reputation for academic excellence in fields integrally related to its geographical location, such as Anthropology, Spanish Language and Literature, and Latin American Studies. Over the years these strengths have been carefully preserved and expanded to bring UNM an international reputation in these areas.

The University has many ties with Latin America, in addition to the Andean Study Center—as much a UNM campus as the main one at Albuquerque—in Quito. The University has developed special teacher education programs, in Spanish, for educators at different levels from several Latin American nations, including Paraguay, Ecuador, Brazil, and Bolivia. In addition, it has now or has had cooperative arrangements with Colombia, Brazil, and Ecuador for long-term programs aimed at improving elementary and secondary teacher training and school plant facilities in those countries.

Dartmouth Basketball 1971-72

With nine of 12 lettermen returning, including every starter, plus the addition of outstanding sophomore manpower, the prospects for improvement in Dartmouth's basketball program appear excellent.

Heading the returnees is Paul Erland, the 6-5 All-Ivy forward who won the Ivy League scoring title and has broken virtually every Dartmouth scoring record. He has a two-year scoring average of 22.8 points per game. As a junior, Erland set Dartmouth records for points in a game (44) and became the first player in Dartmouth history to surpass 600 points in a season (618). He also was the Indians' top rebounder (8 per game).

The top returnees with Erland are junior guard James Brown who averaged 18.9 points plus 6-10 center Jim Masker (9.8 ppg). This pair, along with guards Gary Dicovitsky and George Riley, give Coach Blaney an effective nucleus. Riley and Dicovitsky came on rapidly late last season. Both provide a steady influence to the squad.

of the strongest backcourt combinations in the East.

Jim Piebes, Greg Hannah, Tom Eggleston and Brian McAuliffe are the other top soph prospects.

The other returning lettermen are four juniors— forwards Robin Derry, Bud Martin and Ray Sansouci plus guard Doug Bate.

The key newcomer is talented Bill Raynor, who should provide the ball-handling ability in the backcourt that has been missing from Blaney's scheme. Raynor, who had a 24.6-point average for the 1970-71 frosh (15-4) has the ability to control the momentum of the game and, with Brown, should give Dartmouth one

George Blaney

George Blaney, an outstanding backcourt performer at Holy Cross from 1958-61, is in his third season as Dartmouth's basketball coach. He was basketball coach and director of athletics at Stonehill (Mass.) College for two years before coming to Dartmouth in 1969.

A native of Jersey City, N.J., Blaney was co-captain of the 1960-

61 Holy Cross team which had a 21-5 record and reached the semifinals of the NIT. He ranks 10th among Holy Cross' all-time scoring leaders and had a career average of 13.1 points per game.

Upon graduation in 1961, Blaney played professional basketball for six seasons. He played with both the New York Knickerbockers and Philadelphia 76ers before turning to coaching.

His record as a head college basketball coach, including a two-year record of 27-19 at Stonehill, is 50-47.

Dartmouth Ninth Oldest College In U.S.

Dartmouth College, northernmost of the Ivy League schools, is the ninth oldest college in the United States.

Chartered in 1769 and founded in the summer of 1770 as a northern frontier school by Eleazer Wheelock, a missionary with a vision of civilizing the wilderness, Dartmouth today is a multifaceted university complex exploring new frontiers of the mind and society.

In keeping with its fundamental purpose of providing undergraduate education to train young people to become leaders in society, Dartmouth's board of trustees voted in November to adopt The Dartmouth Plan for Year Round Operation and to admit women to the undergraduate college beginning in September, 1972.

The Dartmouth Plan is a highly innovative and major new educational scheme which will enable Dartmouth to use its physical plant throughout the entire year. It will enable Dartmouth to expand student enrollment without over-crowding and without major capital expense for expansion of the physical plant.

Women Undergraduates

The addition of women as undergraduates is another major step in Dartmouth's 202-year history and is consistent with the College's basic principal for developing leaders of outstanding young people.

In all, the Dartmouth Plan will provide unusual freedom in selection of courses and an academic calendar that best suits a student's interests and educational objectives.

By means of various programs, the Dartmouth campus extends, in effect, to study centers around the world. On-campus intellectual life at Dartmouth fills the spectrum from the arts to engineering, from medicine to business administration.

The modern Dartmouth is symbolized at the poles by the Hopkins Center of the creative and performing arts and the

Courtyard pool at Hopkins Center

Kiewit Computation Center where Dartmouth president John G. Kemeny co-developed the Dartmouth Time-Sharing System for the educational uses of the computer.

Campus Center

Hopkins Center, with its theaters, concert halls, music and art studios, workshops and galleries, has made the arts a vital presence at Dartmouth.

Kiewit Computation Center, home of one of the most advanced educational time-sharing systems in the nation, provides 85 per cent of Dartmouth's students the opportunity to acquire a hands-on knowledge of this new tool.

The historic focus at Dartmouth has been on undergraduate education. In addition to 3,200 undergraduates, however, another 600 graduate students are enrolled in the Dartmouth Medical School, the Thayer School of Engineering, and the Amos Tuck School of Business Administration.

The combination of small size, vast resources and an ideal location in the New Hampshire hills gives every program at Dartmouth a flexibility and responsiveness unmatched at any other college.

Oregon Basketball 1971-72

Going into his initial season as head coach at Oregon, Dick Harter inherits four lettermen—including a pair of starters. Rusty Blair, a 6-9 senior, has been a starter for the past two campaigns, and the other is Ken Strand, also a senior. Both are established, experienced performers who could play for anybody.

The other two Webfoot lettermen saw limited service as sophomores. Doug Little, 6-3½ swingman, and 6-0 guard Clyde Crawford are the other Ducks with experience.

Sophomore Billy Ingram is one of the best of the newcomers, and topped the freshman squad in scoring with 521 points. Only Stan Love ever scored more as a freshman at Oregon.

Among the other prime candidates are Paul Sunderland, Bruce Posey, Kim Swaim, Mike Ela, Mark Bailey, Walt Reynolds, Eldridge Broussard, Paul Halupa and Chris Thompson.

Rusty Blair

Oregon looked impressive in its early December games. The Ducks beat Montana, Portland U and Gonzaga, and lost interesting and fairly close battles to Ohio State and Villanova. The Villanova score was 78-73, and the Ohio State game 68-57.

It's true that Oregon did lose heavily through graduation ranks, but there's enough talent remaining to hope for a winning season for the Ducks.

Dick Harter isn't used to losing, and he doesn't want to start now.

Harter Moves From Penn

Dick Harter

Dick Harter is Oregon's 11th basketball coach and succeeds Steve Belko, for 15 years the head mentor of the Ducks.

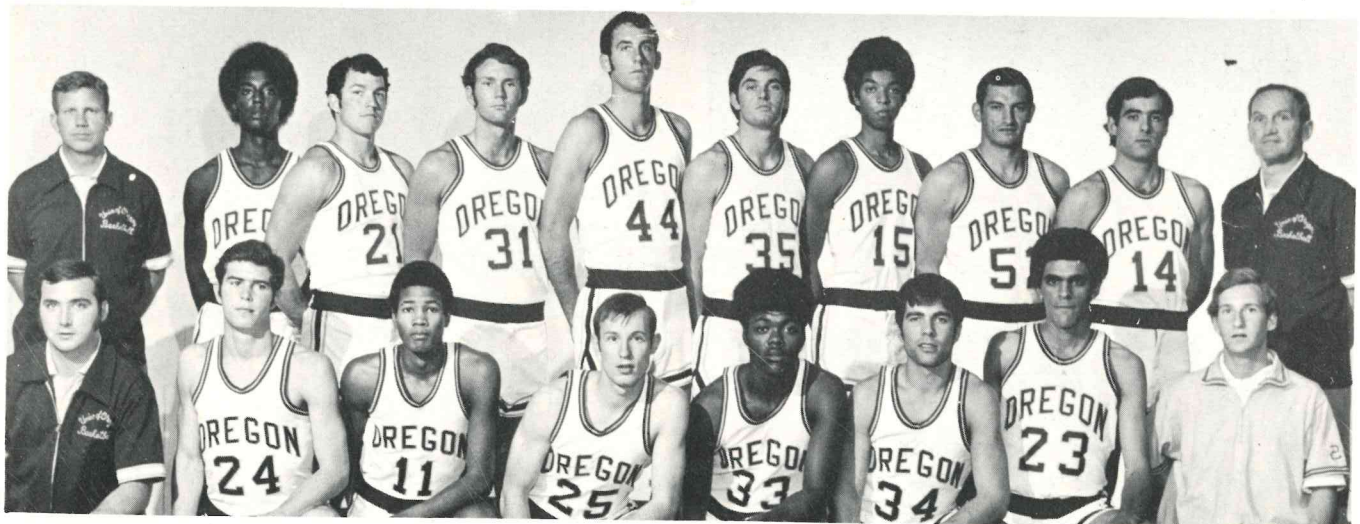

Harter's 104 - 53 career coaching mark speaks for itself. For the past five years he has been head coach at Pennsylvania. He started his career at Rider (N.J.) College and after a 16-9 mark in 1966, he accepted the head coaching job at his alma mater.

In his final season at Penn, Harter's squad won, for the second straight year, the Ivy League and Big Five championships. Penn was 26-0 and added two more wins before bowing to Villanova in the Eastern NCAA Regionals. His 1971 team also won the Quaker City Championship.

We improve with age.

We like to think of ourselves as the Chateau Lafite-Rothschild of the automotive world.

We keep getting better every year.

Since 1949, we've improved our little car over 2,200 times.

Last year we gave it a more powerful engine and nearly twice the luggage space it had before.

This year we added 29 more improvements.

Since '49, we've made over a thousand body and chassis improvements.

Since '49, we've made over a thousand engine and transmission improvements.

And the reason for all this progress?

Since '49, we've spent absolutely no time making silly styling changes.

What you see once again, is what you get.
