THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March 16, 1973

In welcoming you to this renewal of the competition between track and field squads of the Soviet Union and the United States, I am reminded that these meetings have always been characterized by the good sportsmanship, determined effort and camaraderie that necessarily prevail in the field of sport. This is as it should be and serves as an example to the peoples of all nations.

We are proud of the athletes who will be competing in this fine international meet during the next two days. We are proud of the sacrifices they have made to achieve athletic fame; we are proud of their competitive spirit; but, primarily, we are proud of the spirit that such a meet engenders-- one of hard-fought but friendly competition that we hope will always dignify the relations between our country and theirs.

To the athletes, coaches, officials and spectators I extend the warm greeting of friendship and welcome on behalf of the United States of America.

Richard Nixon

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
RICHMOND 23219

For the second consecutive year, Virginia's Capital City will be the host for the Russian-American Track Meet.

On behalf of the citizens of the Commonwealth, I would like to welcome all those from the Soviet Union and the United States who are participating in this fine competition.

I am sure all participants will learn why Virginia's hospitality is famed around the globe.

Governor

City of Richmond

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA 23219

To the Spectators and Athletes of
The World's Second Indoor Russian-American
Track and Field Event

Welcome to the City of Richmond and this most exciting event in the life of our City. As you may know, this is the second time we have held this international contest in our new Coliseum and we look forward to another fine evening of track and field events.

The City of Richmond Coliseum and Richmond Newspapers are most pleased to serve as co-sponsors of this meet in cooperation with the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States. It is hoped that this athletic contest will lead to greater understanding among the people of the world as they represent their countries in sports competition.

To the contestants our best wishes for a successful evening of track and to the spectators our hopes for a fine night of sports entertainment.

Sincerely,

Thomas J. Bliley Jr.

Welcome:

For the past several years, the AAU of the United States has been instrumental in conducting these competitions between the United States and the Soviet Union. We are pleased that as the United States member representatives to the IAAF, the international body that governs the sport of track and field, we are in a position to bring this fine competition once again to this area.

In order to present events like this, and to continue to conduct the literally hundreds of thousands of athletic competitions in which we are involved each year, the AAU depends upon an almost totally volunteer organization. More than 250,000 AAU volunteers help to conduct these meets throughout the United States in eighteen AAU sports, including track and field, swimming, diving, wrestling, basketball and boxing. These people devote their time so that sports will continue to play an integral part in the life of our nation.

These athletes, too, have devoted their time to sport in the pursuit of excellence. Their courage, hard work and sacrifice are rewarded in meets like this. It will be here in Richmond that they will be rewarded for all this work. We applaud them and wish the athletes from the Soviet Union and the United States great success on the occasion of this second indoor track and field meet between our countries.

MORE THAN A MILLION IN

Richmond's Coliseum

IN August of 1971, The Richmond Coliseum was opened with flying flags, marching bands, a Governor who threw a symbolic ball through a giant hoop and a crowd of more than 150,000 who came to the Open House Weekend. Since that time, the largest sports-entertainment center in Virginia has won two national awards (one for the opening promotion and one for architectural excellence) and the adulation of central Virginia audiences with a mixed variety of spectaculars.

More than 1,112,500 spectators attended the Richmond Coliseum in its first ten months of operation. They spent more than $4 million to purchase tickets, and are estimated to have generated an additional $4 million in economic impact in the City.

The international event of the season was the world's first in-door Russian-American Track Meet, so-sponsored by the city and Richmond Newspapers. More than 9,400 track fans meant a standing-room-only situation that was repeated time and again during the first season.

The Virginia Squires drew more than 72,800 customers to professional basketball in just twelve games and the Richmond Robins added about 250,000 in their 38 home hockey games.

Other hits were Ringling Brothers' Circus, 112,659; Disney on Parade, 70,145; Holiday on Ice, 67,953; Loretta Lynn Rodeo, 24,793; Jesus Christ Superstar, 10,640 and 10,903; Sonny & Sher, 9,909; and Elvis Presley, 11,791.

There were 210 events during the first ten months of operation, with an occupancy rate of 67.5%—a busy schedule—that will be increased slightly during the current fiscal year.

RICHMOND NEWSPAPERS, INC.

As co-sponsors of the 1973 Russian - American Track Meet we would like to welcome you to this outstanding international event. We trust that you will enjoy this evening and depart, as most of us did last year, feeling that you have witnessed fine, spirited competition between two of the world's great track powers.

Later, at your leisure, you might like to delve deeper into this article which contains some of the background of our company. But for now, welcome . . . and enjoy the evening.

GERALD W. ESTES,
General Manager, Vice President,
Richmond Newspapers Inc.

The history of the state's largest newspapers reaches back into an era when the California Gold Rush was front-page news and P. T. Barnum was plastering New York City with posters advertising Jenny Lind's first concert.

It was in 1850 that James A. Cowardin founded the Richmond Dispatch, which quickly grew in popularity across the state and became known as a leader in use of new technological advances as well as in reporting and forming public thought. By 1861 the Dispatch had a circulation of 18,000—one of the largest in the South—and was one of the first newspapers to install a double-cylinder Hoe press, considered a major modernization for a penny newspaper.

Publication was suspended temporarily when the Dispatch's office was destroyed in the general fire during the Fall of Richmond in April of 1865 but, as the Civil War ended, it emerged as the lone survivor of several pre-war dailies.

A few years later, the Daily Times began publication with first Capt. Page McCarty and then Major Lewis Ginter providing leadership. The paper languished and finally Major Ginter, in 1887, gave it to his friend and attorney, Joseph Bryan, who promptly made it into a competitive force. Among the distinctions gained by the Daily Times was its priority as the first newspaper south of the Potomac to install a Mergenthaler linotype and its powerful opposition to "Free Silver."

Meanwhile, across the James River in Manchester, another editorial voice spoke out as the Evening Leader began publication in 1888. In 1896, Joseph Bryan acquired control of this paper in addition to the Daily Times. He brought The Evening Leader across the river and, in a new setting, issued Vol. 1, No. 1, on Nov. 30, 1896.

During the same era, the morning Dispatch and the evening News (started in 1899) were fighting for circulation. Both were owned by John L. Williams. Journalism historians agree that the competition could have ended in disaster for all four of Richmond's papers had it not been for a meeting between Joseph Bryan and John L. Williams in 1902, at a YMCA fund-raising dinner.

By the end of the dinner, the two had agreed that consolidation could best serve the city's interests. Thus, on Jan. 26, 1903, came an historic moment in Virginia journalism as the first combined editions of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, published by Joseph Bryan, and the first combined editions of The Richmond News Leader, published by John L. Williams, hit the streets. They specialized, respectively, in morning and afternoon fields.

Five years later The News Leader was purchased by Joseph Bryan, just before his death in 1908. In 1914, the Times-Dispatch was sold by his heirs, to be managed by a succession of owners.

For 26 years the two newspapers went their separate ways until 1940, when they were consolidated in one building and the statutory merger changed the corporate name to Richmond Newspapers, Inc.

In May, 1966, another milestone was passed when Richmond Newspapers, Inc., "went public" and 350,983 shares were publicly offered at $22 per share.

After considerable growth and diversification in the general field of communications, RNI in March, 1969, announced the formation of Media General, Inc., a new holding company, with RNI, contingent upon stockholder approval, to become its wholly owned subsidiary. On August 15, 1969, Media General announced the consummation of a number of corporate actions, including acquisition of the two Richmond newspapers.

Today, the two papers operate in one of the nation's most modern plants, with new production methods and electronic installations signifying a new era in newspaper history. In at least one major respect, nothing has changed. The old-time competition continues as each paper maintains its own, distinct news staff and editorial department, all in separate quarters.

While costly, this has paid off in the quality of the product. The newspapers are nationally recognized as among the best. Pulitzer prizes, Sigma Delta Chi awards and numerous other honors have come to Richmond. In 1970, for example, the National Newspaper Association chose The Richmond News Leader first in "general excellence" among the nation's dailies.

Sports' Super Show

By BOB BRACHMAN

Sports Writer

San Francisco Examiner

It was dramatic. It was emotional. It was nerve shattering. It was superb and it was weird.

It—the never-to-be-forgotten 1962 USA-USSR track and field duel at Palo Alto—may well have been the Super of any athletic spectacle ever staged on American soil.

It had everything—scheduled and spontaneous.

It had tension—before, during and afterwards.

It was attended by threats. Relations between the two nations were strained. The seemingly endless AAU-NCAA power feud was at a peak. There were heavy guarantees to be met, no assurance that they could be.

Stanford men like the late Al Masters, then athletic director, and Payt Jordan, whose special charge it was to put on the show, were warned they'd never get it off the ground.

They and others involved were as grim as the dour-faced Russians themselves, until the curtains parted for the opening of the two-day show on a balmy, sun-drenched Friday, July 21, 1962.

What was to happen during the next thirty-six hours was to literally bring tears to the eyes of thousands of Americans and Russians alike, psyched so high emotionally by the events they no longer could control themselves and cared less.

"One hundred fifty thousand Americans and 77 Russians can't be wrong," we wrote the following day.

One Russian writer, weeping openly, got as far as "I don't think I see like it again" before breaking down completely. Vladimir wasn't alone. Hard-bitten U.S. sports-writers leaned against Anatoliy and had a good cry right along with him.

Bob Young, Stanford's then manager of operations, called what happened to him on the closing day of the meet "the weirdest."

"There were 84,000 people in Stanford Stadium for the Saturday windup and, just before the little post-meet ceremony was to start, I headed outside to see what I could do to help get the crowd started homeward.

"I was talking to some of the special police and the darndest thing happened. Not one single person came out of any of the exits. It was the craziest feeling, not having anybody coming out. Meantime, there was a wave of roars coming out of the stadium and it sounded like 84,000 people had suddenly gone berserk.

"We rushed inside to see what the heck could have happened and there it was."

"It" was a sight which caused Jordan to comment: "One of the truly great moments of triumph for the world in the realm of sports."

What was supposed to be a token "victory" lap around the stadium's track suddenly had become a mass demonstration where there was no telling American from Russian, Democracy from Communism, "You're great" from "Spacibo."

U.S. athletes carried the Soviet flag. Russians packed the Stars and Stripes. Jerseys were exchanged until you couldn't tell who had competed for what country.

More than 150 athletes were on a kick—parading in total disarray, arm in arm, hand in hand, while the Marine Band in attendance for the occasion frantically sought to come up with appropriate march music that would serve as rhythm for both the marchers while keeping tempo with the clapping of hands the fans had switched to after their voices had given out.

"God Bless America" was played in march time; so were parts of the USSR national anthem.

Even the American flag, which had been hanging limply the entire afternoon high atop the stadium wall, seemed to catch the spirit of the occasion and began dancing happily.

Strangely, the red hammer and sickle flag of the USSR, not 10 feet away, remained quietly at its moorings. It was welcome to join in that day.

For more than two hours, the post-meet celebration continued.

Young remembered that his meet operations preparations included hiring of some 120 off-duty officers from the Santa Clara County Sheriff's office, "for special policing in case some kind of trouble should develop.

"When we saw what was going on inside," the Stanford official added, "we knew none of us were going to be needed. Nothing was going to interrupt what, under the conditions, had to be the greatest friendly demonstration I ever hope to see."

Baseball buffs will argue forever that there's never been anything to equal a World Series, just as horse-racing fanatics will claim you're way out of line unless you sing along with the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home" at Kentucky Derby time.

Football nuts will look at you as if you're some kind of idiot if you say any sports event ever has come close to the Super Bowl and the fight mob will rate you punch-drunk if you make a comparison to a heavyweight championship fight.

Track and field?

Well, maybe the football, boxing, baseball and horse-racing buffs will bend a little if you suggest the Olympic Games.

The Tass writer from Moscow at the USA-USSR meet in '62 will argue with those who put their noses up when it's claimed track and field put on athletics' Super Show at Stanford Stadium in '62.

"America does something very good here," he said at a time when America was doing nothing good in Soviet eyes.

Let football, boxing, horse racing or any other of the superior sports match that one.

Sports equipment for your feet.

Maybe you've never thought of your socks as sports equipment.

But if you look at it, they're almost as necessary as a golf club is to golf, a bat to baseball or a racquet is to tennis.

And just as you need different equipment for these sports, you also need different socks.

Some sports demand heavier socks, others lighter ones. Some even need a fashionable sock. And every sport requires a sock that's tough enough to stand up to the roughest game, yet feels comfortable and absorbent.

To give you specific socks for specific sports, we designed an authentic All Sports Collection.

Now whether you play tennis, golf, bowl, hunt, camp, ski, skate or take up team sports, we have the right socks for you. Available in sporting goods, department and men's stores.

So next time you go out for your favorite sport, equip yourself—feet first.

AAU STORY

Since its founding in 1888, the AAU of the United States has been recognized throughout the country—indeed, throughout the world—as the symbol of American athletic excellence. As one of the principal founding members of many international sporting federations—the International Amateur Athletic Federation (track and field), International Amateur Swimming Federation (aquatic sports), International Amateur Wrestling Federation and others—the AAU has been instrumental in enhancing the calibre of athlete in these sports as well as promoting and fostering developmental programs. Athletes of all ages and from all parts of the nation thus have the chance to compete in the eighteen sports in which the AAU is involved.

Under its guidance and through AAU encouragement, the modern Olympic Games were revived in 1896. Having given much of the impetus to the resurrection of the Games, the AAU was also instrumental, principally through its most famous founder James E. Sullivan, in organizing the American Olympic Committee, forerunner of the United States Olympic Committee. And to this day, the AAU plays a major role in deliberations on Olympic matters for our Nation.

Through its more than 250,000 volunteers working in fifty-eight associations in all fifty states, the AAU undertakes the enormous task of conducting extensive developmental programs designed to raise athletic standards of the more than 54 million youngsters between the ages of 6 and eighteen in the United States. More than one-third of the youngsters in our country—some seventeen million—participate in one or another of the AAU's developmental programs. Additionally, more than five and one-half million school age youngsters take the AAU's highly acclaimed physical fitness test—given free of charge in the hope that it will focus attention on physical fitness and encourage growth in this worthwhile activity.

At the other end of the chronological scale, the

The Sullivan Award, emblematic of the nation's outstanding amateur athlete, was presented for 1972 to Olympic marathon champion Frank Shorter by AAU President David Rivenes.

AAU is fostering the development of a comprehensive Master's Program. This innovative approach to athletics for the over-40 track and field competitor is based up age-group competition and provides incentive for the adult group to begin or continue active participation in sports. While Master's competition is presently underway in only track and field and swimming (where the age-groups begin at 25) expansion to other sports is envisioned in the near future, hopefully opening an entirely new era in American athletic pursuits.

In a recent study by the International Olympic Committee, it was disclosed that only one country in the world does not provide governmental subsidization for its amateur athletes—the United States. Thus, the AAU is actively promoting joint sponsorship with American industry to further support and improve its athletic programs. Last year the AAU and Chevrolet became partners in promoting the first Junior (19 and under) International Track and Field competition between young men of the United States and the Soviet Union. Long recognized as one of the essential elements of European excellence in the sport, Junior competition will further strengthen our strategic position in track.

More importantly, this combination of United States' industry with United States' sport is further testimony to the viability of the modern American free enterprise system. Emphasizing this point in a meeting in December of 1971 with AAU leaders, President Richard M. Nixon noted this trend and congratulated then AAU President Jack Kelly for his awareness of this important relationship.

Filling its traditional role of expanding excellence in sport and physical fitness, the AAU has taken the lead in providing novel and modern approaches to America's athletic scene.

Valeri Borzov Working Toward New World Records

by VICTOR CHAIKA

Novosti Press Agency Correspondent

A Soviet track and field team has accepted the invitation of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States and will compete in a number of indoor meets, ending with the National AAU Indoor Championships on February 26.

The Soviet team, which will leave for the US at the beginning of February, includes Valeri Borzov, the Munich Olympic champion in the 100-meter and 200-meter sprints.

Borzov, 23, is now a postgraduate student at the Kiev Physical Culture Institute. His athletic training began in 1962, in Novaya Kakhovka, the Ukrainian SSR, under the tutelage of Boris Voitas, a trainer at the local sports school. Since 1966 Honored Trainer of the USSR Valentin Petrovsky, Candidate of Science (biology) has been his coach.

Borzov has on the USSR sprint title six times, the European junior crown, three times, and the European senior outdoor and indoor titles, three times each. His best times are: 100 meters-10 seconds even; 200 meters-20 seconds even; 400 meters-47.6 seconds.

Below, a Novosti Press Agency correspondent interviews the Olympic gold medalist:

Q. Did you hope to win both sprint gold medals at the Munich Olympics?

A. I first set my sights on a gold medal in the 100-meter dash, and on a bronze in the 200-meter. But Petrovsky believed that I could win both events. I've grown accustomed to believing in my coach, but still, that victory in the 200-meter and in a new European record time, was more of a surprise to me than anyone else.

Q. Could you explain, briefly, how you prepared for the Munich races?

A. My Olympic preparations began on October, 1971 in a Kiev suburb, where Yevgeni Arzhanov and I put in hours of cross-country running. We practiced indoors and later switched to outdoor workouts. I competed in a number of meets to assure myself that my coach and I were headed in the right direction.

Q. Can you describe your method of training?

A. It's Valentin Petrovsky's method, first of all, and besides, it's the only one of its kind. At least, that's what I think. Naturally, I use the same exercises as many other sprinters, but the amount, the ratio is a bit different. My USSR teammates sometimes call me lazybones, because I train less than the others: four times a week in the preparatory period, and five times a week just before an official meet. The longest a workout lasts is three hours. You see, the point is the intensity of practice: I accomplish the maximum in a comparatively short period of time. Valentin Petrovsky has developed certain scientifically, substantiated exercises especially for me. In short, I like his method: It suits me.

Q. You're doing scientific work, too, aren't you?

A. Yes, and once again it's under Petrovsky's guidance. The subject of my research is sprinting, or, rather, early training in this style of running. I still vividly recall my own first steps in this sport, which I believe were unusual in many respects. I hope that my thesis, if I am successful with it, will be of help to many young beginners.

Q. What do you do in your spare time?

A. Frankly, I haven't much free time, with postgraduate studies, and running practice, and, since the Munich games, very interesting meetings with college students, school-children, and workers from Kiev, where I speak of my impressions of the Olympics. Naturally, I go to the movies, the theater and concerts, and even do a bit of fishing from time to time.

Q. What are your plans in sports?

A. After the indoor meets in the United States, I intend to enter the European indoor championship in April. Later, in the summer, come the main events—the World University Games and the USSR championship. I'm not so sure whether I'll beat my own records this season—competition in 1972 took up a lot of my energy—but world records in the sprint continue to be the main object for me and my coach in the future.

BULOVA AND THE WORLD OF SPORTS

by DAVID EISENBERG, Sports Director
Bulova Watch Company

There are many reasons why a company becomes involved in sports. For some, their business depends on it. For others, it feeds the vanity of executives to be associated with famous athletes.

For Bulova, there is some business in supplying Timers for the sports world, although this is such a fractional part of the company's operation that it is almost beyond sight.

Very few of the Bulova executives become associated with the athletes they see. Harry B. Henshel, the Bulova president, is so busy timing races when he's at a meet that he rarely sees anything of the athlete except his torso when he crosses the finish line.

Still, Bulova's involvement in track through the Accutron Phototimer which you see here at the U. S.-U. S. S. R. meet and so many other major events in track and field, is a direct result of Henshel's involvement in sports, as well as that of his father, the late Col. Harry D. Henshel, before him.

It is an involvement that is doubly interesting in these times when so many other companies have given up participating in sports because of today's economy.

Harry Henshel was a young member of the firm in the 1940s when he first became interested in the possibility of a special timing and photographic device that would help the officials at track meets. Because of his interest in horseracing (Harry has a stable of horses), he was a regular attendant at the track.

He was impressed by the Photofinish camera which was of such great help to the judges in determining horse race winners. Harry wondered if time could be added to the camera to make it useful for human racing.

The only way to find out was to ask. He had Bulova engineers study the camera to find out. They reported that it could and the result is the camera which has been helping officials at track meets since 1948.

Bulova's interest in servicing sports, with the Bulova Accutron Phototimer and with the thousands of Bulova Sports Timers which are loaned to officials for use at hundreds of meets throughout the country, stems from the sports interest of the men who helped build the company.

The late Col. Harry D. Henshel was a great sports enthusiast. He was prominent in Amateur Athletic Union activities and was a founder of the Maccabiah Games which are held regularly in Israel as an Olympics for Jewish athletes from all over the world.

His son, a Brown graduate, has always been interested in sports, especially track and field. Thus, it was natural that Harry B. Henshel serve annually on the AAU Timing Committee of which he was chairman for some years.

Providing the services of the Bulova Accutron Phototimer and Bulova Sports Timers for use at meets is an expensive one with no financial reward. Bulova owns two Phototimer units. It does not manufacture them for public sale. The two units it owns have cost more than $200,000, plus the constant cost of changes and improvements.

It is a complicated operation which requires the services of at least five, more often six and seven, experts at a meet. There are five basic segments to the operation, the first of which is the camera.

The many new arenas, like Madison Square Garden in New York, have increased the problems of the operation because of the greater distances between the camera and the darkroom. But a picture is ready for the judges scrutiny within three minutes after each race.

That picture is something the finish line judges on the floor have found hard to live without as Bulova, now in its 25th year of providing the service, has learned.

SMALL WOMAN IN THE LONG DISTANCE

Story About Olympic Champion Lyudmila Braghina

by IGOR OBRAZTSOV

Novosti Press Agency Correspondent

On the invitation of the USA Amateur Athletics Union a group of Soviet athletes have gone to America to take part in a number of indoor meets, winding up their tour on February 23 by a performance in the AAU's open winter championship.

This group includes the 1,500-meters Munich Olympic champion Lyudmila Braghina (she bettered the world record in each of the three Olympic heats, bringing it down to 4 min. 1.4 sec. in the finals).

Braghina was born on July 24, 1943. She is 165cm. tall and weighs 53 kilos. Her profession: physical education instructor. She has been taking up athletics since 1965. Coach: Viktor Kazantsev. She is many-time national cross-country champion, and the 1,500-meter USSR champion of 1969, 1970 and 1972. Last summer she set a world record of 8:53.0 in the 3,000 meters.

Lyudmila does not remember her father, who perished at the end of World War II. Her mother was left with four children on her hands, Lyudmila being the youngest. She was a frail, shy girl. And she is that way to this very day.

Frequently sick, doctors advised her to move from the Urals, where she was born, to the South. Thus Braghina found herself in Krasnodar (South of the Russian Federation, Black Sea area), where she enrolled in a teachers training school to major in physical education. While still in high school she went in a lot for basketball, skiing, high jumping and loved to run. Thus, her decision to become a physical education instructor was quite evident.

During her studies at the institute she met coach Viktor Kazantsev (1966). They discovered that they had much in common in the methodics of training runners. Thus, the coaching novice got a new pupil. However, there was one thing that made this alliance difficult; they lived a thousand kilometres away from each other—Kazantsev in Kirov (northeast of European USSR), and Braghina, as we know, in Krasnodar.

Kazantsev asked her at the time: "How then will I be able to check on the fulfillment of the plans, for we are living in different cities?" Lyudmila's reply was: "I don't have to be controlled I made up my mind to run in all seriousness, which means that I will carry out your instructions." So distance did not hamper their cooperation; a lively correspondence ensued, and the mail brought her regularly the plans drawn up by Kazantsev.

Now Braghina is frequently asked how she had managed to achieve such fast progress. She invariably replies: "The main secret is that my coach was always at my side."

To live far away from each other and being simultaneously side by side is no paradox in this case. They understood each other excellently and, in addition, it so happened recently that they trained side by side—during the days of short training meets. If Braghina ran during a workout 20 kilometres, her coach did not lag behind her a single step in the literal sense of the word. The point is that Kazantsev, in the language of athletes, is a "running coach."

Both of them had tremendous running loads and both proved to be the winners: Braghina because she could follow her coach, and Kazantsev because he could check on his pupil's actions.

Kazantsev realized that the former methodics, which helped his pupil get the master's ranking, were unsuitable for storming the Olympic heights. And, making use of the latest achievements in physiology, psychology and pedagogics, together they elaborated their new training system.

Long before Munich Braghina began to train at high altitudes according to the method of the so-called supercompensation. Her results kept on increasing, but in the 1971 European championship she landed only in sixth place. The winter and spring of the Olympic year were dedicated to pinpointing the defect in training.

They found what was the trouble and corrected it, which is testified to by Braghina's record performances on the eve of the Olympics and, of course, at the Games themselves, and the fact that by Munich, Braghina reached the peak of her sporting form with extraordinary precision.

Today Braghina and Kazantsev are already seeking new speed reserves. The champion is dreaming of covering her favourite distance within four minutes.

The games committee wishes to thank the University of Richmond for its help and for making its facilities available to the athletes who are participating in this meet.

A cushioned foot gets this athletic sock off the ground. Absorbs shock. Buffers the friction between toe and you. Double layers of super-soft, super-comfortable Hi-Bulk Orlon* acrylic do the trick. It's got to be an easy winner in any league. At your favorite store. Now.

Foot-deep in comfort

Burlington Socks
FIRST-AID KIT

To relieve hot feet and sticky lint, apply one color daily.

Need a sure cure for drab footwear? Try Gold Cup. Those 75 fast-acting colors mix and match with your leisure wear to liven it up.

However, an exciting show of colors won't do anything for trouser cling, sticky lint, hot feet, and stubborn soil. Our exclusive Endo-Stat™ anti-static process will.

Because it helps reduce static, so it gets the lint and cling out. And it also helps absorb moisture, so it makes your feet seem cooler.

For soothing comfort, we knit Gold Cup from a remarkable cashmere-like blend of 75% high bulk Orlon® acrylic and 25% stretch nylon.

Then we add a specially engineered toe and reinforced "Hi-heel shield" for up to 10 times longer wear than socks without this feature.

All this for only $1.75 a pair. Or try all 75 colors for $131.25. And cool your heels in style.
